KEPT IN THE COOLER.

Nine Days With the Thermometer Almost at Freezing.

Some few weeks ago the ENTERPRISE mentioned the fact that the establishment of the ice works here would make an appreciable difference in the quality of the food that will be served at the tables of most of our people. At that time we did not know that there was in contemplation by one of our leading firms a plan which has now been adopted and will improve the food of every person who purchases of them. It is a well established fact that meat of all kinds is not fit for table use for some time after it has been slaughtered and in all eastern cities the leading butchers will not cut beef till it has remained in cold storage for at least nine days, and if it was known by their customers that they were being served with meat not properly cured by this cold storage process they would withdraw their patronage and buy at some other place. The English people are well conversant with this requisite of prime beef and can tell not only by the taste but at a glance when it is on the cutting block whether it has been properly treated, and they will buy no other. In order to meet the demand for the very best quality of meats the firm of Albright & Warner have been at a great expense in fitting up a suitable room for curing all meats handled by them. This room is in connection with the cold storage works and is well worth a visit from any one. The room is about 12x20 and 8 feet high. Entering you are almost shocked by the sudden change from the warm atmosphere without to the cold air inside, for this room is constantly kept at a temperature of 34 degrees. This is done by means of a system of pipes through which is forced the condensed ammonia. These are placed at the top of the room the sides of which are hollow and so arranged as to promote circulation, the warm air passing up through the top of the room and the cold air replacing it from the sides, entering at the floor. Here the meat is taken from the slaughter house and hung up to season, and so nicely is the temperature of the room adjusted that not a drop of moisture appears anywhere on the walls, showing that the meat is not cured by a sweating process but by cold dry air, which makes the very best quality of meat. Here it is allowed to hang for nine days when it is taken out as needed and placed on the block in their shop and at once cut up and furnished to their customers who in this way always get fresh, tender meat, the best that the market affords. It has not been kept hanging around where the flies can have access to it and there will never be any parts that have become tainted. Every particle of meat handled in this way will always be fresh, juicy and sweet. In order to meet the demands of their customers the firm will hereafter always carry in stock a fine line of well cured fowls besides all kinds of fresh meats.

So much for this line of their business. There is still another department which is of as great importance to the consumers of meat and that is their purchasing department. As this firm is the largest butchering house in the city and always make it a point to buy the very best that the market affords, and buy for cash their customers can always get the best meats of them. Then again all animals purchased are allowed to run in their fine pastures for several days or perhaps weeks after being driven in from the range so that they are never killed when in a heated condition which greatly detracts from the quality of the meat. Any one must at once realize that Albright & Warner with all of these advantages are in a position to supply the best quality of meat to be found in the city, and to still further accommodate their patrons they will, on the first of the week place on the road, a wagon expressly fitted up for the delivery of meat to all customers in the city and suburbs. This wagon will be so arranged that parties living in the extreme limits of the city can get their meats as fresh as those living one block from their well arranged and attractive market. Should you wish at any time to examine their fine cold storage rooms they will take pleasure in showing you through.

SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shape and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleases the people. Try it and participate in the contest for prizes. See that a TEN TAG is on every 10 cent piece of SPEAR HEAD you buy. Send in the tags, no matter how small the quantity.

Very sincerely, THE P. J. SORG COMPANY, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.
