We used various medicines, also called in two doctors, but nothing done him any good until we used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave immediate relief and soon cured him. A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

The Team Throws the Buggy Over a Cliff, Killing Mrs. Bradley and Child.

The evening of the Fourth was saddened by the receipt of the news soon after nine o'clock that there had been an accident near the motor bridge across the Clackamas and that it had probably resulted in the death of one or more persons. Nothing definite was known as to particulars, but quite a crowd hurriedly took the car down to learn the nature of the accident and to render aid if possible. They found the report not exaggerated in the least and as a result of the accident Mrs. M. P. Bradley and her youngest child are already dead and two boys are in a critical condition on account of injuries received at the time.

It seems that M. P. Bradley and family, consisting of himself, wife and four children were returning from visiting in Portland and were just west of the motor bridge driving this way when a trace came unbooked frightening the team so that it was impossible to stop them at once and in spite of Mr. Bradley's utmost efforts they ran across the car track and the tongue dropped to the ground and was broken in two. This frightened the horses still more and they became wholly unmanageable and rushed straight towards the river which makes a bend at that place and comes very close to the road, the bank being precipitous and about 40 feet high.

When the team reached the verge of the bluff, it wheeled short off to the left and this threw the buggy over the precipice with considerable force. Mrs. Bradley and the four children were carried over with the wagon and struck upon the rocks below where the children all lodged but Mrs. Bradley was evidently stunned or killed outright and rolled off of the narrow ledge into the river so that her body was not found for about an hour, it being discovered then by Phil Tatro and Sidney Smyth lodged upon the dam about three hundred yards below the scene of the accident. Mr. Bradley was thrown out just after crossing the motor track and was not hurt. As soon as he perceived that his wife and children had gone over the bluff, he himself slid down to the bottom where he found the children lodged on a narrow ledge of rocks, but his wife was missing. He called loudly for help and was at once answered by two fishermen from Portland who had heard something of the noise occasioned by the accident. They at once aroused the neighbors who procured ropes and rescued the unfortunate parties from their dangerous position and removed them to the house of Rev. Gilman Parker where their wants were cared for by Dr. Locke of Portland, who fortunately was one of the rescuing party. He found the baby, a girl of 18 months, unconscious and apparently injured internally. The oldest boy sustained a concussion of the brain and internal injuries which are quite likely to prove fatal. It was thought that the other children were not injured very badly but in the night the other boy began to vomit blood showing that he too had sustained internal injuries. The little girl is the only one who was thrown over who does not appear to have been seriously hurt. During the night the baby died thus making the casualty a double one. Dr. W. E. Carl was summoned and went to the scene where he rendered valuable assistance in caring for the injured.

The body of Mrs. Bradley was taken from the river to the Gladstone depot where it was found that life was extinct and it was thought from the nature of the injuries that death had been instantaneous as there was a bad blow and cut over the right eye and temple and the scalp was torn from the top of the head and laid back in a flap for the space of about four inches square. Harry Dyer, superintendent of the East Side

Railway company was still at this end of the road and he at once placed a special car at the command of the parties looking after the body of Mrs. Bradley and the wounded and it was made good use of in procuring medicine and in conveying the body to this city where an inquest was held on Wednesday morning on both bodies the finding of the jury being in accordance with the facts as given above.

Mr. Bradley is completely prostrated with grief. The family had not lived long in this section having moved from Washington to the John Myers farm two miles south of town last winter, but though but a short time here they were generally esteemed and much solicitude is expressed by all relative to the sad occurrence.

The funeral of Mrs. Bradley and the babe occurred from the Methodist church Wednesday at 11 o'clock. The other members of the family who were injured are getting along as well as could be expected and the doctor has strong hopes that they all may recover. An examination of the scene of the accident shows that the rock upon which the children lodged was not less than 40 feet below the road. It is about six feet by eight and is the only place along the road where they could have gone over without going direct into the water which is very rapid there and which would have meant certain death for all by drowning.
