

ON THE DIAMOND.

State League Makes a Change—Oregon City Loses to Portland.

When the clubs comprising the state league talked up organization in the city it was the intention to have Salem as the base of the contesting clubs but the boys in the capital city found it impossible at this time to arouse interest in the city to form a club and Independence was substituted for Independence to play was too far and Salem has made arrangements to substitute for Independence and take the latter's place in the league club which Independence had reorganized and will henceforth be known as the Salem nine.

Oregon City has lost its boss pitcher who has secured a position with the California club with whom he has agreed at a salary of $90 per month, the boys state that they have signed a man who will put the ball through in great shape.

The game on Saturday was not well attended but was considered fairly interesting to those present as it was close up to the finish when Portland won by two runs.

Sunday witnessed a good crowd on the grounds, and they were gratified with an interesting game which like the previous day was closely contested and which was won by the Portland club, the score standing 10 to 7 in their favor. The following is the score:

Distributing Time Tables.

It is a fact not generally known that the furnishing of railroad time tables to the hotels of the city is performed by a regularly incorporated company, who make that work their sole occupation.

Something had to be done to correct the evil of having old time tables in the coatroom and porters' closets of the hotels which gave nothing but misinformation to the traveler, if indeed he could find any time table at all, and so the general passenger agent of one of the trunk line roads hit upon the scheme of forming a time table supply company. This was done about a year ago and has now assumed large proportions.

The profits in the business are considerable and come from the railroad companies. Some seventy or eighty of the prominent roads of the country are subscribers. They supply their folders and time slips to the company and subscribe liberally for the work of having them distributed among the large hotels and other resorts of New York and Brooklyn. The company furnishes each hotel with a neat rack, either stationary or revolving, and supports a delivery wagon and an agent, whose duty it is to make the rounds weekly, putting new time tables in place and replenishing the depleted supply.

As a consequence it is a far easier and more certain matter to obtain accurate information in New York regarding the movements of western and southern trains than it ever was before, and every one who has waited for an hour or more at a lonesome railway station or has lost a half day through misinformation will bless the genius who invented a railway time table supply company.—New York Herald.

Old and Young.

We are clear that it is by no means the special defect of our time that the old do not enter heartily into the life of the young. Comparing the present generation with generations past, we should say that one of the most distinctive notes of the present day is the sympathy of the old for the young—a sympathy which the young generally and rather heartily appreciate, but which they do not very often reciprocate. Instead of conversing so as to turn "the back of the conversation" toward the old, they usually expect and confidently expect that a good deal of its life and interest will be contributed by the old and are rather scandalized if the expectation be disappointed.

In fact they habitually expect the old to be juvenile in their interests, and they are very much seldom disappointed than the young people of forty or fifty years ago, if they had formed the same expectations (which they certainly did not often do), would have been. Just as the rich are now habitually expected (and very often justify the expectation) to find their deepest interest in alleviating the condition of the poor, so the old are now habitually expected to find their deepest interest in rendering the pursuits and pleasures of the young still more attractive; nor do they very often disappoint expectation.—London Spectator

Hidden Treasure of British Royalty.

King John was both a seeker for and a hider of treasure. We find him digging for treasure in Northumberland about the sites of the stations on the Roman wall, and he was reputed to have stores of treasure in his favorite strongholds. Somewhere buried in the sandy estuaries of Lincolnshire are the golden crown and jewels of King John, with the chests of treasure that were carried in his train. But we speculate, too, about other hoards, chiefly buried beneath the foundations of his castle walls, the secret of which was lost in the sudden death of the greedy king.

Again there is a royal treasure perhaps at this moment lying hid in some rocky chasms of the mountains of Wales—nothing less than the treasure of King Edward II, which he carried with him in his flight from his triumphant queen and her paramour, and which they vainly, it would seem, after his capture endeavored to recover.—All the Year Round.

One Use of Mathematics.

In an offhand sketch of Professor Chrystal, one of his old pupils tells how this mathematician made his science aid him in the management of his class. The daring spirits—say those who were going into their father's office, and so did not look upon Chrystal as a door locked to their advancement—sought to bring sunshine into the room. Chrystal soon had the blind down on that.

To relieve the monotony, a student at the end of bench ten dropped a marble, which toppled slowly downward toward the professor. At every step it took there was a smothered gruff, but Chrystal, who was working at the board, did not turn his head. When the marble reached the floor he said, still with his back to the class: "Will the student at the end of bench ten, who dropped that marble, stand up?" All eyes dilated. He had counted the falls of the marble from step to step.—Chicago Post.

He Knew Congressmen.

One of the late Leopold Morse's hobbies was the rehabilitation of the American navy, and his plan of proceeding was thoroughly characteristic. He insisted on the government giving out all its shipbuilding to contractors instead of attempting to do any in its own yards. "Spread de work ofer de whole coast," he would say in his Bavarian dialect, "and you vill haf efery congressman from a seaport district voting for your appropriations because bart of 'em vill go to his own people. In dat vay you git a fullgrown navy in about 'free years.'"—Kate Field's Washington.

An Eloquent Appeal.

Under the arches of the Rue de Rivoli a blind man bears on his breast a picture representing indistinctly an earthquake or an explosion of freedamp. A gentleman stopped and kindly questioned the poor beggar. "Tell me, my good man, in what country that catastrophe occurred of which you have been the victim?" "I can't tell. I bought the painting at an auction sale."—Lyon Republicain.

Snow Storage.

Countries that have inadvisedly allowed their forest lands to be denuded eventually come to the conclusion that such recklessness involves most serious penalties. This appears to be the case in certain parts of Russia, where severe droughts cause great distress and injury. These droughts are ascribed to the gradual depreciation of the country along the principal rivers, and to the removal of obstacles in the river beds. Both these factors combine in causing the rain-water and melted snow to pass off more rapidly, and the low water level of the rivers therefore become abnormally and permanently low.

To remedy this ponds are to be dug or built up in the courses from which the rivers are fed, and on the plains long banks are to be raised, against which snowdrifts will be formed. The snow thus accumulated will melt more slowly than the thinner masses elsewhere, and will form a valuable supplement to the water supply at the period of the year when the droughts have hitherto obtained. This is simply a wholesale adaptation of a practice that has long been attributed to the more provident Russian peasants, who are in the habit of using plank walls to intercept the snow. The banks thus formed are said to frequently serve as the family water supply up to the month of August.—Nevada News.

Depew's Corpse Story.

Chauncey M. Depew told the following story at a banquet in New York: A classmate of mine, a preacher, was located in a spiritualistic neighborhood, and the leader of the spiritualists' band died. His next friend came to see the clergyman, and said: "We have something of the old Puritan spirit left, though we have renounced it in our practice, and we want our leader buried by Christian ceremonial. Will you attend?" My friend, the clergyman, consented in the best spirit of Christian charity. He gave out the hymn, read a passage of Scripture and made such remarks as he conscientiously could, whereupon the wife of the dead spiritualist rose and said that she had a communication from her husband.

That critical spirit tore the eulogium to pieces, ripped up the Scripture quoted and denounced the hymn. The surviving leader of the spiritualist band came to the clergyman and said: "We beg your pardon. We had no idea that our leader would come back here and act in this way, and we hope you will forgive us." "My friend," the clergyman said, "I will forgive you, because it is the first time in the many ministrations that I have had of this kind in this parish that I have ever been assailed by the corpse."—New York World.

Pirate Treasures.

The period fruitful above all others to the (imaginary) treasure seekers is that of the bold buccaners, of the Spanish galleons charged with bullion and of the treasure fleets that were the choicest prey of the gallant sea rover.

Pirate or buccanier, he had some favorite haunt about Key West or among the islands of the Spanish main—some cave filled with booty which one day he hopes to transfer in safety to his native Devon. But a ship heaves in sight—it is a Spanish man-of-war—and such a contest ensues as has inspired the popular muse of the sailors' "shanty."

There is an end of the pirate and his crew, but the secret deposit remains as a prize for some future adventurer. Or it may be that the buccaners are only shipwrecked, and that one of the crew escapes with the fragment of an old chart on which is marked the exact position of the buried treasure. The subject leaves plenty of play for the imagination, and, although often worked up in fiction, has always a kind of freshness about it, with a savor of truth and fact, for doubtless such a hoard does somewhere exist, if we could only find it.—All the Year Round.

A Clever Cat.

There is a large Maltese cat making its headquarters at the Seventh police precinct station that is bound to go on record as the smartest feline known. Like all other cats it delights in capturing sparrows, but unlike other cats it has never been known to let a bird get away that it made up its mind to catch. Lieutenant Thompson is authority for the statement that the cat, perched on the cornice of the building, made a leap of twenty-two feet into a tree and caught a sparrow. The lieutenant has also watched the cat while bird catching and has counted nine sparrows carried to a spot, and after the hunt was over devoured one by one.

A peculiar trait of the cat is that there is but one man who reports at the station that she will make friends with, and he is Patrolman Rowland. When he is on night duty the cat will follow him from the time he goes on duty until relieved the next morning. All the dogs in the Newburg region have encountered the cat on several occasions, and when she is in sight the canines take the other side of the street.—Cleveland Press.

Now He Feels Better.

A Woodward avenue man, who likes his joke and his good living, hasn't been feeling well lately, and one day last week he went to see a physician. The doctor felt his pulse, looked at his tongue and became thoughtful. "Um—er," he said, "do you eat before going to bed?" "Well, yes, usually." "Of course you do. I was sure of that. The symptoms are very evident. You'll have to stop it." "Entirely?" asked the patient quietly. The doctor became thoughtful again. "Um—er," he said slowly, "about how much do you eat, and about how long after it before you go to bed?" "That depends somewhat, doctor," and the patient looked serious. "I usually eat three meals, and they are scattered along between 8 in the morning and 8 at night." Then the doctor made a few tropical remarks and said, "Two dollars, please."—Detroit Free Press.

HEART DISEASE 30 YEARS.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB., April 28th, 1892.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I had been troubled with HEART DISEASE FOR THE LAST 30 YEARS, and although I was treated by able physicians and tried many remedies, I grew steadily worse until I was COMPLETELY PROSTRATED AND CONFINED TO MY BED WITHOUT ANY HOPE OF RECOVERY. I would have very bad sickening spells, when my pulse would stop altogether, and it was with the greatest difficulty that my circulation could be started. I was unable to bring me back to consciousness again. While in this condition I tried your NEW HEART CURE, and began to improve from the first, and now I am able to do a good day's work for a man 68 years of age. I give DR. MILES' NEW HEART CURE all the credit for my recovery. It is over six months since I have taken any, although I keep a bottle in the house in case I should need it. I have also used your NERVE AND LIVER PILLS, and think a great deal of them. Z. AVERY.
