

DEATH OF A PIONEER LADY

After A Happy Wedded Life of More Than 62 Years.

Mrs. J. H. Darnall passed quietly away the 11th inst. after only a short illness. She had complained of feeling badly at times for some ten days, and was confined to the sick room on the Monday before her death. She was born in Randolph county, North Carolina Dec. 11, 1806. Her father moved to Madison county, Kentucky when she was a small girl and after living there some time moved to Livingston county, Ill. where she grew to womanhood and met her ideal, J. H. Darnall and married him March 8, 1831, they being the first white couple married in that county. He was an expert at spinning and weaving in her young days and spun and wove the wedding garments they were married in.

After their marriage they engaged in farming and as he was a good smith, had in connection with the farm a shop where he worked rainy days and spare hours when work on the farm did not require close attention. In April 23, 1865 they started for Oregon with a single team and landed October 23, in Clackamas county. A few days after their arrival they settled on the farm that Sinton Paine now owns and have lived in the immediate neighborhood since that time. Her family consisted of seven children, two died when small, one in the army, and three still live to regret and mourn the loss of a dear mother. One son and daughter live near the old home in Ill, where the happy couple began married life and the other son, N. H. Darnall, lives in this place. She joined the Presbyterian church when a small girl and has always been loyal to her belief during the troubles of her entire life.

She was small in stature, but full of energy and ambition, always doing her work until the last year. Dr. Casto preached the funeral sermon at the same residence selecting as his text Job 14:1. The doctor delivered an excellent discourse full of pathos and sympathy. When the good old man was called to see the last sight of his true wife he said "My good God how long before I can go?" No wonder he was stricken over 62 years had he lived with his loved one and had never been away from her more than three weeks at any one time.

This grand and happy wedded couple should and could be an example to the unsatisfactory marriages that take place now-a-days and reveal to them the fact that the right party awaits them if they would only prolong the time until they could meet.

Carus Happenings.

Carus, Aug. 14.—The music of the binder heard daily in the harvest field, Sunday accepted. Mrs. Will Exson of East Portland is here to spend a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. May. Prof. Evans and wife came out from Oregon last week, being the guests of J. K. Graham for a few days. The professor has been engaged as a teacher in this district. We understand that he is intending to secure a permanent home in this vicinity. Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Landon had the pleasure Saturday afternoon of entertaining the Misses McGord of Mount Pleasant. Mrs. C. G. Curtis and son, of Castle Rock, Washington, are visiting in the family of her brother, A. O. Hayward. An entertainment was given last Wednesday evening at the house of Fred Bullard. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening. A fair number of guests were present and the occasion pronounced enjoyable. Horton Graham had a narrow escape last week from being run over by a horse and wagon. Bert Hunter also barely escaped being killed by a falling tree. His pet dog Bennie was crushed to death. Calla learns that Elm Cooper purchased thirty acres of land from Dr. Gouches instead of forty as was previously stated.

CALLA.

The success of Mrs. Annie M. Beam, of Keokuk, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of diarrhoea in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many others. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnston, Pa., after the great flood, on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the Diarrhoea very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I knew of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and I heartily recommend it." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Geo. A. HARDING.

Last Sunday was an important and interesting day to the Catholic society of this city. His Grace Archbishop Gross being present for the purpose of celebrating high mass in the morning and to conduct a large number in the evening. There was also present about 80 Catholic knights from Portland who were royally entertained by the knights here, a sumptuous dinner being served in the new school house.

Legerdmain That Failed to Work.

The bright young man—who isn't so very young either—was fortunate enough to secure a seat right in the midst of Deacon Huggins' young ladies' Bible class and by their arch manners was so far decoyed from his usual staid indifference as to try and make himself agreeable.

The speaker of the evening pleaded most earnestly the cause of sweet charity and made the last remaining quarter and nickel burn in the scriber's pocket.

When the deadly contribution box began its gyrations in his aisle, the newspaper representative began to chuckle under the mellowing influence of a happy thought. He would execute a neat little piece of legerdemain with that quarter and 5 cent piece, and while properly impressing his fair neighbors with the larger coin would really drop in the smaller.

He held the quarter daintily between his thumb and finger and pressed the 5-cent piece between his third finger and his palm. There was a click of a coin in the bottom of the box, a rather unusual twist of a large coil and a bland smile on the reporter's face.

A second later the young man started as if he had been shot and turned excitedly toward the deacon, who was now two seats behind him.

He had dropped in the quarter! The deacon mistook the gesture as a sign that the young man had been overlooked, and again he thrust the box under the reporter's nose.

What did he do? Just what you would. He put in the nickel. And walked home.—Boston Herald.

Curiosities of Glycerin.

One of the great advantages of glycerin in its chemical employment is the fact that it neither freezes nor evaporates under any ordinary temperature. No perceptible loss by evaporation has been detected at a temperature less than 200 degrees F., but if heated intensely it decomposes with a smell that few persons find themselves able to endure. It burns with a pale flame, similar to that from alcohol, if heated to about 300 degrees and then ignited. Its non-evaporative qualities make the compound of much use as a vehicle for holding pigments and colors, as in stamping and typewriter ribbons, carbon papers and the like.

If the pure glycerine be exposed for a long time to a freezing temperature, it crystallizes with the appearance of sugar candy, but these crystals being once melted it is almost an impossibility to get them again into the congealed state. If a little water be added to the glycerin, no crystallization will take place, though under a sufficient degree of cold the water will separate and form crystals, amid which the glycerin will remain in its natural state of fluidity. If suddenly subjected to intense cold, pure glycerin will form a gummy mass which cannot be entirely hardened or crystallized. Altogether it is quite a peculiar substance.—Good Housekeeping.

Forewarned of Her Child's Death.

A few months after my father's death the infant son, who had been pining himself ill for "papa," was lying one night in his mother's arms. On the next morning she said to her sister, "Alf is going to die." The child had no definite disease, but was wasting away, and it was argued to her that the returning spring would restore the health lost during the winter. "No," was her answer. "He was lying asleep in my arms last night, and William (her husband) came to me and said that he wanted Alf with him, but that I might keep the other two." In vain she was assured that she had been dreaming; that it was quite natural that she should dream about her husband, and that her anxiety for the child had given the dream its shape. Nothing would persuade her that she had not seen her husband or that the information he had given her was not true. So it was no matter of surprise to her when in the following March her arms were empty and a waken form lay lifeless in the baby's cot.—Mrs. Annie Be-

SPEAR HEAD is absolutely, positively and distinctively different in flavor from any other plug tobacco. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any similar shade and style on earth, which proves that it has caught the popular taste and pleased the people. Try it, and participate in the contest for prizes.
