OLD TIME SMUGGLING.

How the Business of Cheating the Government Has Degenerated.

Instead of a run by night in an open boat from the French coast to the shores of Hampshire, Sussex, Essex or Kent, we have to content ourselves in these prosaid times with petty attempts to cheat the revenue, for which women are more frequently responsible than men. Such an incident once happened at Belfast, where an Irishwoman named Mary McMahon was brought to the police court charged with keeping whisky on premises which were unlicensed. Sergeant Jones deposed that he went into the defendant's house and found a woman named Grayton, who was soated before the firs. Upon searching her the sergeant came upon 36 bottles of porter and two bottles of whisky stowed away in her petticoats. To the inexpressible amusement of the spectators the sergeant produced the peccant garments in court. Each petticoat was made of coarse sacking and was girt with innumerable pockets, and all of them lined with soft material so as to keep the bottles from clinking

> He, however, who would fain find amusing stories about running the blockade and smuggling contraband of war through an enemy's lines may turn with advantage to many transatlantic magazines which teem with articles revealing the illicit trade carried on during the American civil war. Ladies of the Belle Boyd and Mrs. Greenhow type were caught trying to make their way down south with countless boxes of copper caps and packages of quinine stitched into their crinolines. Captain Roberts, better known under his real name, Hobart Pasha, tells us that he smuggled great quantities of Cockle's pills into Secessia, but that the southerners, differing in taste from the lamented Colonel Fred Burnaby, would have none of them.

A certain young lady, who appeared to be in delicate health, took ship at New York for Havana, whence she hoped to run the blockade into Mobile. Overpowered by seasickness during the voyage, she could not prevent the stewardess from discovering that she was girt round about with linen bandages, among which many costly drugs were stowed. Such is the complexion to which modern smuggling has come at last. Our coast guards have no preventive duties to perform, and their only raison d'etre is to watch that no foreign foe makes a descent on our coasts. Charmed by a Snake.

As I was several miles out in the country, riding horseback from Pomona to Etiwanda, I saw a jack rabbit standing still only a few feet from the road. I drove up close to the animal, which still refused to scamper away. On the contrary, the rabbit stood or sat transfixed to the spot, though making a constant nervous, shuddering motion, as if anxions to get away, but at the same time being held to the spot. I was surprised that the rabbit did not flee at the approach of myself and horse, and when I looked a little sharper I saw a large rattleanake coiled up under some bushes, his head uplifted, about six feet from the

A ragged, barefooted boy, a crossing in the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for sweeper, had doffed his cap to the Duch ess of Sutherland in the hope of recognition, when he observed a well drossed but rakish looking man following her across the street, as if trying to force upon her attentions that were evidently obnoxious to her. There was a look of distress on the duchess' face.

"Scuse me, lady," said a boy's voice beside her, "shall I punch 'is 'ead?" She turned, looked down angrily upon the little sweeper, and then said, smiling:

"Why, it's Jemmie!" She had remembered his name after all, and at that moment the boy was hers, body and soul. Without waiting for another word he dashed off and turned a sort of violent "cartwheel" so adroitly calculated that he landed with two very muddy feet in the middle of the offensive man's waistcoat.

Then, before the man could recover from the shock, the boy had slapped him with one muddy hand across the mouth and with the other had deposited a handful of the filthy compound on the back of his neck.

The next moment the boy was in the grasp of a policeman, who dragged him away to the nearest police station. He was just being charged by the constable with having committed an assault when the duchess entered. She spoke kindly to the gamin and then explained the affair to the inspector on duty.

At her request the boy was set at liberty, and he staid only long enough to say to the inspector:

Hints About Driving. When driving, you must watch the road. Turn out for stones, so that the horse shall not stumble nor the wheels jolt over them; avoid the mudholes and places where the going is bad; let the horse slacken speed when the road becomes heavy, and if you want to make up time do it where the ground slightly

It is a common mistake to think that a horse can haul a carriage easily on the level. On such a road he has to be pulling every moment; there is no rest. Whereas when the road now rises and now falls the weight is taken off him at times, and he has a chance to recover his wind and to rest his muscles. As between a level road in a valley and an up and down road over the hills, the latter is by far the easier for a horse to When you come to a long level stretch, let your horse walk a bit in the middle of it.

Almost everybody knows that for the first few miles after coming out of the stable a horse should be driven slowly, and especially if he has just been fed. On a journey it is of the utmost importance to observe this rule. Be careful, however, not to check a young nag too quickly when he comes fresh out of the stable. Give him his head, talk to him soothingly, and presently he will come down to a moderate pace. If you pull him up at once, you vex him extremely, so much so that he is not unlikely to kick.-Harper's Young People.

Some things of course in the French display—especially of pottery and bronzes—are purely decorative, and some of the visitors of course are destitute of taste. The consequence is that occasionally a person will come along who will gaze at objects of transcendent artistic merit with no feeling but one of mystery and curiosity. So it happened the other day, when a simple minded woman stopped for awhile in front of one of a pair of vases 5 feet high, the price of which is $5,000.

She gazed at it attentively for a few moments and then said dryly to M. Me-laile, who stood by, "Pray, what is that
