LOW COST POULTRY HOUSE.

A Light Frame Building With Shed Roof For Two Breeds. The accompanying illustrated description, from Country Gentleman, gives a good idea of the exterior and interior arrangement of what is undoubtedly the lowest cost serviceable poultry house that can be devised. It has a "shed" roof, but the usual stiffness of that sort of construction is relieved by a neat finish around the top. The frame may be comparatively light, as the up and down boarding assists greatly in supporting the roof. The sides and floor are of matched boarding, and if the tongues and grooves are covered with white lead when the boards are laid an increase of warmth will be secured. The sides should be neatly covered inside with tarred or the red, resinous paper used by builders, and kept in place by the big headed tacks that are made for use with such paper. Laths used for this purpose harbor vermin.

The interior arrangement needs explanation. The platforms extend under the roosts from the ends of the building to either side of the hall. Directly under the platforms and accessible for gathering eggs from the hall are the nests—a double row of them. This gives great convenience and also affords shade for the nests, which fowls desire. The water fountain, accessible from both pens, can be filled from the hall.

Windows are provided only on the south side. A mistake is often made in building too much window space, letting in too much heat in summer and letting out too much heat by radiation in winter, especially at night. A barrel should be kept under each platform and the droppings frequently scraped from them into the barrels. If the bottom of each pen is covered to a depth of four or five inches with dry loam or road dust, a shovelful may then be dipped up and scattered over the platforms and over the droppings in the barrels.

Applying Manure to Wheatfields.
In experiments on methods of applying manure at the Utah station, Director Sanborn tells that the largest yield of wheat and straw was secured on the plot where the manure was plowed under. The next largest yield was where it was applied on top of the ground in the winter and laid on a level soil to be washed into the ground, for here, unlike lands in the east, very little, if any, water runs off the surface of our level grounds. It will also be seen that when the manure was harrowed in it gave better results than when it lay wholly on top, both being applied at the same time in the spring.

A fact prominently brought out is that the ratio of straw to grain varied very much with the different methods of application. When harrowed in, there were 77 pounds of straw per bushel of wheat. When plowed under, there were 94 pounds of straw to each bushel of wheat; when unharrowed, 64 pounds of straw to a bushel of wheat; when manured in winter on the surface, 94 pounds of straw to a bushel of wheat.

Alfalfa and Orchard Grass.
Professor Beal states in the Michigan Farmer that he has been experimenting at the Michigan Agricultural college with alfalfa or lucern for nearly 30 years. He has also watched its behavior in various portions of the state. He does not consider it profitable except perhaps to mix with clovers or grasses for permanent mowing. It is a poor fighter, starting rather late in spring and stopping early in autumn. June grass gets the start and keeps it, so that alfalfa does not amount to much in a few years. Alfalfa usually remains very slender for a year or so after it is sown.

Professor Beal says of orchard grass that it is especially valuable to sow on strong land with other grasses and clovers for pasture. For meadow it is also good in mixtures, but many farmers allow it to get too nearly ripe before cutting. It blooms three weeks before timothy and very soon becomes harsh and woody.

Enemies of Sugar Beets.
From the Nebraska station comes a bulletin giving brief descriptions of leaf hoppers, white grubs and webworms. The last mentioned is the chief insect pest of the beet. Experiments have been tried with arsenites and kerosene emulsion, with good results. A number of parasites have been reared from worms taken in the laboratory, and doubtless these serve to keep them in check. The life history of the worm is imperfectly known and will be a subject of further study.

Mosquito Bites.
Every summer the question about how to deal with mosquitoes or mosquito bites is presented by many correspondents. Perhaps the following counsel on the subject from a Massachusetts paper may be useful:

The best antidote for the bite of a mosquito undoubtedly is ammonia weakened with a little water or salt and water. Some people go so far as to press the poison out of the bite with some small metal instrument like the point of a watch key before applying the antidote. This prevents the painful swelling that sometimes occurs. As in other cases, "one man's meat is another man's poison," and the same remedy will not apply to all individuals. Some find camphor most efficacious, and salt and water will not avail. Ammonia, however, seems to be generally successful as a neutralizer of the mosquito poison. Where there are large quantities of the mosquitoes and no reason for their appearance is apparent it is well to look about the premises for something which attracts them. An uncovered barrel of rainwater will bring them in hordes, and damp places and stagnant pools are spots where they delight to congregate.

Cholera in Mecca.
Not often in the holy but unclean city of Mecca has the cholera been more destructive than it is this year. The deaths from it, as stated in such reports as can be procured, range from 500 to 700 a day, without taking account of the mortality along the ways leading to the city. The cases at Mecca are numbered by the thousands. It is supposed that a large proportion of the victims must be pilgrims, for the settled population of the place is but little over 40,000. The number of pilgrims this year, especially from India and Persia, has been inordinately large. The ordinary sanitary laws are disregarded in Mecca as in other cities of the Mohammedan world. Anything like scientific treatment of the cholera is unknown. The fatalistic believers regard a visitation of it as the decree of Allah. They are willing that it shall bring them death, if they die within view of the holy city or on the way thereto, as paradise is assured them. The cholera was in Mecca last year. It is almost as constant there as it is in the delta of the Ganges. It often rages fiercely there without approaching any part of Europe.—New York Sun.

Profits on Little Neck Clams.
Despite the prevailing depression in many lines of business, one industry in this section employs a large number of hands and is running overtime. It is that of gathering the delicious bivalves about the size of a silver dollar known as Little Neck clams. The catch in this vicinity averages nearly 100 barrels a week, for which wholesale dealers in New York pay $8 to $10 a barrel. There are usually about 3,500 clams in a barrel, but sometimes when they are running unusually small there may be 5,000. When a New Yorker enters a "swell" restaurant and pays 40 cents for seven or eight of these little bivalves, it can readily be seen that a barrel containing 3,500, and costing about $10, will yield the proprietor something like $300. There is a market for Little Necks all the year round, but it is difficult to catch them during the winter months.—Norwalk (Conn.) Cor. New York Times.

Didn't Hear of the War.
Edie Hickman, an old negro, is the plaintiff in perhaps the most remarkable case ever tried in the courts of this country. She is an ex-slave and brought suit against her master, Joseph Hickman of this county, for $5 a month wages as a family domestic for 24 years, during which time she claims to have been kept in ignorance of her emancipation. The suit was instituted here in 1889 for $1,400 and resulted in a judgment in her favor for $700. Defendant appealed to the Kansas City court of appeals, which remanded the case to the circuit court of the county, which now renders a decision for the defendant. A motion for a new trial has been filed.—Boonville Cor. St. Louis Chronicle.

No Discrimination Intended.
President Eliot has written a graceful letter to Mr. James Jeffrey Roche, the editor of the Boston Pilot, expressing his regret that there is no Catholic institution in the published list of the colleges whose graduates will be entitled to enter the Harvard law school under the new regulations which will go into effect in 1895. President Eliot states that there was not the slightest intention on the part of the faculty of the law school to discriminate against Catholic institutions of learning.

Rather Unique.
A somewhat notorious diplomat and author has lived apart, by an amicable arrangement, from his wife for many years. Last year they chanced to occupy adjoining seats at the theater. No one in that audience who saw the lively conversation that ensued could guess that the participants were a married couple met after a long but wished for separation.

Alderman Mack Bridge of Sioux Falls recently lost a valuable horse that committed suicide. The horse had been very sick for about a month, and several days ago he managed to unlock the door of his stall, and going to some harness that was hanging up in the barn put his head through a portion of it and threw himself to the floor and was strangled.

The Mexican government has decreed deductions of from 5 to 10 per cent in the salaries of public employees and men in the army. These deductions, the total amount of which will exceed $1,000,000 are to take effect next month and will be in force to the end of December.

Monte Carlo seems to have prospered this year more than it ever has done. The shows are now worth five times their original value, and plans are being made for increasing operations. There were nine suicides last year on the premises.

Weed Pest of the Northwest.
The worst weed ever introduced into the wheatfields of America is reported from the northwest. The thistle resembles the tumbleweed in appearance, but may be readily distinguished from it by the sharp spines in clusters of three each, the absence of flat leaves, denser growth, dark color, and by the red color in the roots. The plant must be cut out by the roots before its seeds ripen, and if permitted to spread farther will, it is believed, cause the soil to become barren and fruitless. Senator Hansbrough proposes to ask the general government for an appropriation of $1,000,000 to destroy this weed. Compared to it, he says, the ravages of pleuro-pneumonia become insignificant. The pest was brought here 15 years ago in some flaxseed and has spread until it now infests an area of 25,000 square miles. This district is in the most fertile sections of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Breathing Upon Bees.
There is a difference between blowing and breathing on the bees. To breathe on them in the way you would on a light of glass you were polishing would instantly result in your getting one of the most sudden and smarting lessons you could think of, but if you form your lips as though you wanted to concentrate your breath on the smallest possible point, and blow with vigor, as though you were trying to cool a cup of tea or coffee, you will find it to have quite a different effect, and to exert a soothing influence over the few bees you direct the stream of air against. A writer in Gleanings in Beekeeping says: In examining combs of brood with my two hands occupied this is often very useful to me in getting the bees to move off particular cells that I may want to have a look at. The air directed upon them causes them to wince and withdraw to one side.

Western Recivities.
In the death of the late W. H. Morrison Wisconsin farmers met with a serious loss. Mr. Morrison was the superintendent of farmers' institutes for the state since their establishment in 1885 and extremely successful in that capacity, keeping Wisconsin very near the head of the procession in that particular.

Collector North has finished his report of sugar production in Nebraska. The Grand Island factory has closed, having made 1,855,900 pounds of sugar and having in the warehouse 140,000 gallons of third sirup and 175,000 gallons of fourth sirup, which will make 575,000 pounds of sugar. The Norfolk factory is still running and has made 3,860,000 pounds of sugar.

Professor Shelton, for central Kansas, a region often seriously affected with drought, recommends the following grasses, placing them in the order of their importance: Orchard grass, alfalfa, red clover, taller fescue, Kentucky blue grass.
