The First Was In 1797 and the Latest In 1876-The Memorable Attempt at the Impeachment of President Andrew Johnson-Two Successful Cases.

The removal of federal officers by impeachment proceedings, under section 4 of article 2 of the constitution, has been sttempted seven times.

The Blount case was the first. William Blount, United States senator from Tennessee, was charged in 1797 with conspiring with British officers to steal part of Louisiana from Spain for England's benefit. The house prepared articles of impeschment. The senate expelled him, after putting him under bonds for trial. Blount's defense was that a senator was not a civil officer liable to impeachment, and on the question of jurisdiction only he was acquitted.

Judge John Pickering of the federal district court for New Hampshire was impeached in 1803 for drunkenness and profanity on the bench. The defense was insanity. On trial before the senate. Pickering was convicted by a party vote and removed from his office.

In 1804, Samuel Chase of Maryland, a justice of the supreme court of the United States and one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, was charged with improper conduct on the bench; among other things, with having indulged in "highly indecent and extra judicial reflections upon the United States government" in the course of a charge to a Maryland grand jury. The impeachment proceedings, instigated and managed by John Ran lolph of Virginia, were political in their origin and anturus. Judge Chase was acquitted through the failure of the prosecution to obtain a two-thirds vote against him in young lady might get a more definite the senate on any one of the eight arti-view of a rather fine face. The sun comes golden from the sea;
Across the mesdow as I stray
For you I take the fern fringed way,
To gather violets wet with dow
Which only bloom, my love, for youFor you, my love, alone fer you!

The grasses bend, the dewdrops shine, The grasses bend, the develops shife, The hawthom's breath is awest as wine. The soft wind steals with presence sweet To fing white pends at my feet And lift the leaves from violets blue. Hidden to wait, my love, for you— For you, my love, alone for you!

Blue as your eyes, which hearts beguile,
Their faint perfume sweet as your smile,
I gather them, with fervent prayer
That they my passion may declare;
Their petals pale, tear stained with dow,
May tell how I live but for you—
For you, my love, alone for you!

It's Human Nature.

A well dressed man got on the Sixth avenue elevated the other day and groped along for a strap, which his companion finally placed in his hand. As the former seemed quite uncertain of his footing and was being partially supported by the latter, people stared at him rather hard under the impression that he was intoxicated. He was not only well dressed, but were a handsome ring, heavy gold watch chain and other jewelry. Passengers jostled him considerably as he swayed from the strap, and pretty soon it became evident to those in the vicinity that instead of being intoxicated the man was blind. A young lady made the discovery and immediately arose and motioned the blind man's companion to take her seat. When this had been communicated to the blind man, the latter turned in the direction of the lady and raised his hat respectfully, but declined the proffered courtesy. His companion whispered something in his ears-most likely that the lady was both young and handsome-for the afflicted man began pluming himself and finally turned by changing hands on the strap so that the to ascertain whether his coat was buttoned and pulled down his cuffs-just About a quarter of a century later, as a vain man usually does when be wants to make a good appearance .-New York Herald.

ANIMALS AND MUSIC.

A Composer Thinks All Living Things Sensitive to Musical Tones "The Inflaence of Music on Man, Animals and Plants" was discussed by Director Asger Hamerik in a lecture at the Peabody conservatory. Of the second part of his subject he said:

"There is no doubt of music's power in animals. All singing birds are subject to the influence. The spider, the mouse and the snake can be charmed with tunes. I saw on St. Paul street one day a runaway horse stop suddenly where a street organ was being played and tremble all over. I had once a Gordon setter that would play with his paw on the keyboard of my piano and, with a kind of murmur, try to imitate the human voice, making an effect that, if not musical, showed at least that the dog's mind attempted something in that direction.

"I have had personal experience with the musical qualities of mice, for I once used to play the piano in a room where there were many mice. When I played for a little while, out would come trooping a critical audience of mice, which seemed perfectly tame so long as the music lasted. I experimented with them again and again and arrived at the conclusion that they undoubtedly were in some way influenced by and very susceptible to music. I grew tired of my faithful auditors after awhile and closed the doors of the concert hall to them by having a tinner cover the holes and cracks

"The song of the bird and the crowing of the rooster are not their conversation. They have a kind of chirping for that. What, then, do the song and the crowing mean? Joy, contentment, exultation-as with man. When a rooster has had a good dinner, or when the sun shines brightly and warmly, or when any other cause makes it think that life is worth living, the rooster crows joyously. Music is with man also an expression of emotion, but with him it has been reinced to a science and is not, therefore, used naturally for every expression of happiness, as with the uneducated and nacientific rooster or song bird.

"I believe that everything created, like ourselves, with ears, is susceptible to musical tones, and it is probable-that, if we could only find it out, there is musical material in all such animals that could be developed and cultivated in some way."-Baltimore Sun.

Thought They Were Worth It. Billings was a traveling man, carrying a line of handkerchiefs and neckwear. He met a rather attractive young woman on one of his trips, and before he realized how ill it comported with his duties he had married her. Nature had never intended him for a married man, and he was seldom at home, even when his duties would have permitted him. Finally he became irregular in the matter of remittances, and his wife, needing some pin money, took down his route book and found a letter would reach him at Peru, Ind. So she wrote him there, asking for $10. He was in the Bearss House billiard room when he read the letter. He had no $10 to spare. He needed all his money for his own follies. But the request annoyed him. He got up, walked about the room for a moment, and his eyes at length rested on a deck of cards, lying where some man had completed a game of solitaire. The top card on each pile was a nine spot.

Billings looked at them a moment, then picked up the four cards, inclosed them in an envelope and sent it to his wife. At Crawfordsville he received another letter from her, demanding in indignant terms what he meant by sending her four nines. He sat down in the writing room of the Robbins House and wrote the following reply:

"You wanted $10. I sent you four nines. Four nines are worth $10 any time."-Chicago Herald.

Hotel Life In New York.

At one of the up town hotels a delightfully homelike touch is given to life within its walls by the privilege, when desired, of having the coffee follow a dining party into the reception room. In one particular parlor, which is full of nooks and embrasures, large and small, to accommodate groups of various size, it is quite common to see the quaint little table and dainty service set out before several different companies. The toned make it extremely easy to dawdle indefinitely over this final course, and the groups dissolve slowly and with evident reluctance, to keep evening engagements.

Turkish coffee is often served in odd little oriental cups set in standards, quite like tiny egg cups, and the requisites of this beverage—to be piping hot and of a smooth, creamy thickness-are never missed here.-New York Times.

Mrs. Cobb, the daughter of the Rev. H. V. Elliott, and a son of Edward Elliott, his brother, were one day dining with the celebrated Bishop Wilson of Calcutta, whose sayings used constantly to be quoted. The bishop went up to the former and said: "Your father wrote a great work on the Apocalypse. I congratulate you on being the daughter of such a man!" Then turning to his other For sale by C. G. The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creeny sensation that existed in my arms, hands and leas. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken no seesalon of them. In addition. I had a strainge weakness in my back and around my walst, together with an indescribable 'gone feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creening paralysis, from which according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastuns upon a person, they say it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the satterer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a haif steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as imay seen, but a few dars had passed before every bit of that creepy beding had let me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel ha well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 127.
