Last Thursday the relatives of James Wise received word at Clackamas from Salem, where the young man had been working, that he had died there after a comparatively short illness of typhoid fever. The remains were taken to Clackamas, where they were laid to rest beside other relatives. He was a bright and pleasant young man of good habits who was brought up on his father's farm near Clackamas. At the time of his death he was just beginning life, being in his 23d year.

OREGON'S PIONEERS.

Twenty-Second Annual Reunion—able Addresses and Reminiscences.

The annual gathering which has taken place for the last twenty-four years of those who braved the dangers and hardships of pioneer life to found a state that is to become one of the greatest of the Union, was held in Portland on Friday last. Music hall in the Exposition building was filled to its full capacity with Oregon pioneers and their friends. The public exercises were both interesting and instructive. They treated of the early history of our state and its people. The annual address by Hon. Thomas H. Tongue, of Hillsboro, was a masterful effort and was well received. The other addresses and exercises on the program were of unusual merit. The attendance was quite large, and the good citizens of Portland made the visit of the pioneers to their city a most pleasant event.

Immediately following the public exercises, the annual business meeting of the association was held. The first matter brought up for consideration was the propriety of extending the pioneer limit to 1859, which brought out a lively discussion by F. V. Holman, A. S. Watt, T. A. Wood and Robert Ford, who opposed the measure, while John Minto, A. R. Burbank, Dr. Strong, William Galloway, T. D. Humphreys, W. H. H. Myers and George H. Himes earnestly advocated an extension of the time limit. A vote was finally taken, resulting in the adoption of the measure by a vote of 123 to 86, and hereafter residents of Oregon coming here in 1859 or previous thereto are eligible to membership in the association.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Hon. H. W. Corbett, president; William Galloway, Yamhill county, vice-president; George H. Himes, secretary; Dr. C. C. Strong, corresponding secretary; Henry Failing, treasurer; J. T. Apperson, Clackamas county; J. M. Wagner, Marion county; T. R. Cornelius, Washington county, were chosen as a board of directors.

The following persons were present from this county: H. A. Straight, 1843; Mrs. M. S. Pillsbury, 1850; J. Tompkins, 1847; J. T. Apperson, 1847; W. H. Vaughn, 1843; J. Kruse, 1850; Frank Ford, 1853; J. S. Riskey, 1845; A. Lewelling, 1847.

In his "occasional address" Mr. F. V. Holman spoke of Dr. McLoughlin as follows:

"I have never understood exactly what was meant by the 'Occasional Address,' but I know this, that no speaker can make a mistake when he addresses a meeting of Oregon pioneers to consider that an occasion for speaking a few words about Dr. John McLoughlin. I regret I never knew him. But I know him as the son and the grandson of pioneers and by the consensus of opinions of the pioneers. To know him was a privilege. To be his friend was to be learned in the greatest of all qualities—the quality of humanity. He was great, not only for what he did, but for what he did not do. Possessed of almost absolute power in Oregon and the Pacific Northwest, had he followed what was considered the best of the only interest of the Hudson Bay Company and of England as relating to Oregon, the earliest pioneers, or the greater part of them, must have perished or been forced to return, if that were possible, to the places in the Eastern states from which they came. But he succeeded the perishing, fed the starving, and furnished the needy with cattle and seed to begin life in Oregon. It was not charity—it was humanity. His heart was greater than mercenary interests—his soul greater than a company's or a nation's policy. Policies were naught to him when opposed to humanity. It is to the shame of some of the earliest settlers in Oregon, not true pioneers, that they did not repay the loans of cattle and of seed made to them by Dr. McLoughlin—and all of his loans were made without security. Those settlers who did not repay him were camp-followers, for in every army, whether of war or progress there are camp-followers, who are sometimes mistaken for the soldiers of such an army. The pioneers, hard pressed as they were, had camp-followers—men who, in no respect, can be called pioneers. And it is also true that Dr. McLoughlin's last days were embittered by ingratitude; that his generosity was misunderstood and misrepresented.

But the great mass of pioneers not only returned his loans at convenient times, but they and their descendants hold, and will forever hold, his memory in the most grateful remembrance. The pioneers could not repay Dr. McLoughlin by the returning of so many measures of wheat or so many cattle. It could not be repaid. I would be lacking in my duty if I did not thus speak in praise of the kindness of Dr. McLoughlin to the early pioneers.

When Oregon has grown a little older, when it gets beyond a certain period of money-making and reaches the period of monument-making, I trust, I know, that a grand monument will be erected to the memory of Dr. McLoughlin. The next new county in Oregon should be named for him. It is true his greatest monument now exists—the constant memory of the grateful pioneers and their descendants. But the memory of this noble man should never be suffered to be dimmed, nor should remotest generations of Oregonians be permitted even a chance to forget him and his good deeds.

When such a monument is erected, let it be of grand proportions, let it be crowned with his statue in bronze of heroic size. Let there be engraved on this monument besides his name the word, in great letters, "HUMANITY;" let it also be inscribed that he was a man and a brother; that he was a modern Abou Ben Adhem, and the Oregon pioneers to the remotest generations will bring their children and their children's children to the base of the monument, and with loving hearts tell over and over again the old, old story of the humanity, the kindness and the generosity of the Oregon pioneers' earliest, best and greatest friend—Dr. John McLoughlin.

The members of the Baptist Sunday school, some three hundred strong, marched across the suspension bridge Thursday, with their lunch baskets for a days outing at Tualatin park. The Willamette Falls railway company generously gave the free use of their electric cars to transport the youngsters to beautiful grove and spring at the end of their line. The day was spent in rollicking games and romps by the children and quiet enjoyment by the older people of the party. This park is one of the most attractive in the vicinity of Oregon City and is becoming one of the favorite resorts for picnic parties.
