To Meet the Times.

The subscription price for the Enterprise has been reduced to $1.50 per year, 15 cents for six months. Cash in advance. Subscribers paying at the end of the year will not be entitled to this reduction. The low price is made to get the list on a cash basis and induce all subscribers to pay up, and especially to prevent dead beats from taking the paper and not paying for it by reason of their being law proof. Reduced price will only commence with date of renewal. This makes the Enterprise the cheapest paper in Clackamas county—eight pages all home print and full of live local news.

REV. WILLISON IN LIMBO.

A Checkered Career—Account of his Crooked Transactions.

Some time last fall the Enterprise mentioned Rev. W. A. Willison's departure for the East leaving his family destitute and his creditors in the lurch. As he was formerly located in Oregon City in charge of the M. E. church, the following account taken from the Oregonian, will prove interesting reading to many here. It says:

"Rev. W. A. Willison, the erring Presbyterian-Methodist minister, whose questionable dealing in real estate and heartless desertion of his daughters, created a good deal of a sensation in Portland last September, was arrested in Joplin, Mo., on June 26, and is now back in this city.

While Willison's sudden departure from Portland caused a sensation at the time, the full story has never been told. Last September he was a Presbyterian minister at Piedmont. Before that he had posed as a Methodist minister in Oregon City, and as a Baptist minister in other parts of the state. When he came to Portland, he built a house at Piedmont, in which he and his three daughters, whose ages ranged from 17 to 21 years, lived comfortably. He preached occasionally in Albina and Woodstock and also opened up a real estate office, in which all his crooked transactions were performed under cover of the ministry.

One morning the town became too tropical for him and he remained home for several days, under the pretense of having broken his leg. Callers at the house were informed that his condition was too critical to permit an interview. One day he was missed from his home, and as days passed without his putting in an appearance, an investigation was made by his creditors and it was developed that he had fled from the city. Before leaving he had presented his eldest daughter with a deed to his home and contents.

A day or two later, a man with a mortgage for $2000 on the cottage, and another with a bill of sale of the furniture, appeared, but as the young ladies were destitute and one was seriously ill with consumption, the claimant's left them in charge of the house. For days the young women were without the means of support. In the midst of their predicament, an attaché of a street-car line proposed to the youngest of the three and was accepted, and his earnings went to support the two others. Finally the condition of the sick one became so critical that she was removed to a hospital, where she died soon after. The others are still in the city.

During all the misery of his family, Willison was enjoying Chicago with a Mrs. Cora Lambert, with whom he eloped from Portland. He cut quite a figure in Chicago. There he met Carl Young, formerly a music teacher in this city, who, ignorant of his villainy, introduced him to the ministry of the White City. Willison preached in several of the most prominent Presbyterian churches there and assisted the pastors of other churches to conduct their services. He was registered as a Presbyterian minister of good standing, without a charge, and this alone enabled him to accomplish his ends so far as borrowing money was concerned. Being without a charge, several ministers readily loaned him from $5 to $150, and Rev. T. D. Wallace, of 205 Warren avenue, Chicago, loaned him several hundred dollars. His easy manner and scholarly speech, made him a prime favorite, and he was in clover until a Thiel detective began making inquiries for him when he departed from Chicago as suddenly as he left Portland.

From Chicago, Willison went to New York, and thence through the Southern states. Detectives were constantly on his trail, and at Atlanta, Ga., were but a few hours behind him. At Atlanta, he gave the officers the slip for the time being. But another clue was found, and on June 17, he was located in Joplin. To prevent a possible case of mistaken identity, a Thiel detective was sent down from Portland, and recognizing Willison, arrested him, and immediately started with him to this city, but was tied up in the railway blockade.

The total sum of money which Willison obtained in Portland by fraudulent transactions will not fall short of $7000. He forged the name of J. Robinson, a prosperous farmer living on the Southern Pacific line, to notes aggregating $2000 or $3000 and negotiated them at a local bank. From one Rawlinson, a poor car-cleaner, employed at the Union Pacific, he got $1500, all the man had saved from his earnings of years. To the following named persons he gave bonds for deeds to land in Piedmont, to which he had no title, and obtained notes for the sums mentioned: William Studebaker of Castle Rock, $330; W. L. Woodstock, Wash., $165; Carl Seifert, Castle Rock, $165; Lucinda Gibson, Portland, $400; Frank Studebaker, Castle Rock, $330; Cornelius Burns, Castle Rock, $320; F. L. Gum, Castle Rock, $165; Jonathan Humphrey, Oregon City, $520; Henry C. Schroeder, Portland, $190; Freelin Studebaker, Castle Rock, $160.

These notes were deposited by Willison in several banks as security for loans which he obtained. Many installment payments have since been made on the notes by the victimized parties.

WILLAMETTE FALLS CITY.

Work Under Way at the New Town—Water Works and Sewers.

Few who passed along the old Tualatin road to the Field's bridge in days gone by when majestic trees and decaying stumps covered the ground realized that they were passing over the site of a future city where in place of the monarchs of the forest beautiful and artistic cottages should stand provided with all the modern comforts usual in the best regulated cities. Yet such is destined to be the condition of that spot in the near future. Already the cottages are beginning to dot the ground which has been cleared of every obstructing log stump, leaving the ground fitted for the planting of garden or lawn. Before the piazzas of the cottages erected here will be spread out a panorama of mountain, river and valley scenery which is seldom surpassed even in the most favored spots where the foot of man but seldom treads.

Nature has done everything for this site that she could be expected to do and now upon every side the hand of man is seen busily employed doing the rest, and when in a few weeks or months at the most the artificial arrangements have been completed and made fixtures of the town there will no more choice place to reside in or about the city. These improvements include water-works, electric lighting, electric cars, sewers and sidewalks. The water for the place is to come from a series of fine springs flowing strong enough to supply a city of 10,000 inhabitants. It fairly boils from the ground in its haste to reach the surface and as it sparkles in the fitting sunlight that breaks through the pleasant grove surrounding the springs it makes one's mouth water just to view its transparent depths. As to its taste? Well cooler and sweeter water it would be hard to find go where you will. It is to be pumped up to the hill where many cottages are now being built on lots as fine as one could wish within a few blocks of the electric line. Lights, water in the houses and rides to and from town are to be furnished those living in Willamette Falls at extremely low rates and that together with the beautiful location accounts for the rush which is being made to locate and build there even in these dull times.

The best thing for any one to do is to take the electric car at the west end of the suspension bridge and after enjoying the fine vista and the refreshing ride of ten minutes duration spend an hour looking over this delightful place.
