Ten o'clock Thursday evening is the hour fixed by the climbers of Mt. Hood to fire the red light, which it is expected will be seen from all over the Willamette valley. Reports from the road are to the effect that the mountain will have been ascended ere this by the largest party that ever climbed it at one time.

The attention of teachers is invited to the notice of the annual institute which will be found in another column. The institute is an important educator to every teacher who attends as it gives them new ideas and refreshes their minds upon those subjects which their duties in the school room may not have called out. There is no more important part of a teacher's duty than that of attending the annual institute and no one should miss it this year.

FOR WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE.

Preparations to Inaugurate a Move to Secure it in Oregon.

PORTLAND, July 14.—The executive committee of the Oregon State Women Suffrage Association has decided that, in view of the activity of the workers in other parts of the Union, where many signal victories have been won for our cause during the past year, it is now quite time to rally our forces on the Pacific Northwest and make ready during the summer months for a vigorous autumn and winter campaign.

The world's Columbian exposition gave a wonderful impetus to the equal suffrage movement, by bringing together the leading women of every state and nation, and holding a continuous woman's congress for a period of six months. This congress was of itself the first sign of official recognition, by our government and by the world, of the great feminine but hitherto forgotten equation in governmental quantities. Through it the women of all nations and religions came for the first time into personal contact. They came together, not through the accident of birth, nor because of any lucky alliance with prominent or fortunate men, but because of their own inherent ability and selfhood. The congress discussed all sorts of subjects, including religion and politics, agnosticism and orthodoxy; social purity, education and morality; temperance and sanitation, culinary lore and occult phenomena. Science and invention, literature philanthropy, poesy, progress and prosperity—everything in which humanity holds a common interest, received attention in its turn. Corporations, co-partnerships, monetary science, co-operative house-keeping, agriculture, horticulture, floriculture and above all, baby culture, received due consideration.

In every phase of these deliberations the necessity for women's enfranchisement was self-evident. Every address made, every thought invoked involving any philanthropic or financial consideration whatsoever; every enlightened impulse and every awakening aspiration cast an unerring search light into woman's past history, and aroused new protest against her present status as a political, financial, conjugal and domestic nonentity. The discussion increased in spirit as the congress proceeded, and soon the demand for woman's enfranchisement became fashionable.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Charles Henroten, Mrs. Governor Eagle, and Miss Kate Field and Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper were among the notables who came to its standard amid the wildest enthusiasm. Following closely upon the adjournment of the Columbian exposition came the Colorado election, in which, for the first time in the history, a disfranchised class received enfranchisement through the voluntary votes of the class already in possession of the ballot. Wyoming had set the example by legislative enactment twenty-four years previously; and, unlike the men of Washington, her men were patriotic enough to stand staunchly by her women voters when she became a state.

A constitutional amendment for granting equal suffrage to women is now pending in Kansas, and the leaders of the measure have little doubt that the amendment will be adopted by a large majority at the coming November election. The great state of New York is holding a constitutional convention, and has its regular equal suffrage days, devoted to the discussion of the question before a special suffrage committee, created for the express purpose of giving respectful consideration to the demands of women for their rightful representation in the government under which they are taxed. A full convention and a packed audience greet such notable speakers as Susan B. Anthony, Dr. May Putnam Jacob, Mrs. Jenny Brooks Greenleaf, Lillie Deyereux Blake and Mary Seymour Howell. One of the most impressive speakers who has yet appeared before the convention is Elizabeth Barrill Curtis, daughter of the late George William Curtis, of whose advocacy of the same measure before the constitution convention, 22 years ago, the gifted girl was a pathetic reminder.

Although, thus far, no "remonstrant" has raised his voice before the convention in an attempt to refute the arguments of these women and their many gentlemanly co-workers, a few profoundly learned men like, like Matthew Hale and Walter Besant, and have lifted their noses long enough from the depths of historic tomes to send false alarms and blow them through the pages of renowned reviews. But in doing so they have helped the woman's cause, since, in every case they have called out the wit, wisdom, lore and logic of lady writers, whose keenly sharpened periods scintillate from facile pen-points, and probe their opponents' platitudes as only pens of women can.

Society in the city of New York is all agog with the spirit of the movement. Mrs. Russell Sage and Miss Helen Gould are conspicuous assistants in the women's campaign. The most spacious private parlors of Manhattan's upper tenement are opened freely for the women's meetings. The home-builder elements of New York are at last awake to the perils of a one sexed government. Married men are slow to incite riots, and thus endanger the existence of the home. The average labor agitator of either sex is an unmarried nomad. Although a married woman will seldom incite a riot, it is well known that when the row is on she will fight for her starving family like a tigress defending her cubs.

We believe that the property-holding home-building men of the country see now, as never before, the need of the homekeeping power of women as an authorized factor in governmental affairs. The spirit of the movement does not stop with New York or Kansas. The republicans of California, by what we believe to be a masterly stroke of wise politics, have espoused the equal suffrage cause, giving it a hearty welcome in their party platform. But the most significant sign of progress yet visible in the political firmament, is the recent action of the national republican league, which met in Denver, where, obedient to the demands of women voters, on the free soil of the first state of the Union to enfranchise women by the votes of men, that large and influential body of representative republicans declared themselves in favor of the fullest discussion of the question as a means of education. In proof of its desire for education on the subject, the league gave eager attention to a masterly address by Judith Ellen Foster, president of the national republican league of women. The convention was ended by a grand reception, given at the Palace hotel in its honor by the newly made voters of the state of Colorado, who are the recognized leaders of Denver society.

As we believe the time has come for the revival of our work in the Pacific Northwest, we hereby invite the friends of the movement, both men and women, to meet our committee at the parlors of Mrs. D. S. Duniway, 294 Clay street, on Saturday of each week, at 2 P. M. where equal suffrage meetings will be held regularly until further notice. By order of
LYDIA HUNT KING,
President O. S. W. S. A.
ARAGAIL SCOTT DUNIWAY,
Vice-Pres. N. A. W. S. A.
NORA S. BUTTERFIELD,
Secretary.
