TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

A very interesting meeting of the teacher's association was held at Oswego last Saturday. A large attendance of teachers were present from different parts of the county...

On account of the mishap to the steamer Aliona the teachers from Oregon City and vicinity were late in arriving at Oswego, but they made up for the loss in time by the energy and zeal with which they entered into the work of the day.

Prof. Gary and other teachers from Milwaukee and vicinity came up in a row boat, while ex-Supt. Alex. Thompson and the Clackamas teachers came around by way of Portland. I mention these facts merely to show that Clackamas county possesses a body of teachers, who are alive to the needs of the profession...

The association met in the assembly hall of Oswego's model school building and was called to order by Supt. Gibson.

The first topic discussed was penmanship. Miss Gertrude Finley of the Oregon City schools, being the first speaker. She spoke strongly in favor of the Spencerian system and objected as strongly to the new system known as vertical writing.

Miss Hattie Monroe, of the Oregon City schools, differed with Miss Finley and believes the vertical system to be a great improvement over the older systems. Miss Monroe was loudly applauded for her courage in advocating an innovation on the older methods of writing.

The subject was further discussed by Messrs. Hackett and Ward who condemned the use of copy books, and the former, who is known to be one of the best, if not the best, penman in the county, ably defended the Spencerian system. Mr. Story believed that the teachers should investigate the vertical system before condemning it and said that the need of the times was a good business hand writing.

A. C. Strange reminded the association that the vertical was the only natural system and if adopted would be a great improvement over the others. Messrs. Gibson, Rutherford and Gary also spoke on the question, and the subject was finally, upon motion by Mr. Ward and Gary, referred to a committee of four to investigate the vertical system and report at the March meeting to be held at Milwaukee.

Prof. Gary then extended an invitation to the association to hold its next meeting at Milwaukee, which was accepted, and T. J. Gary, Misses Mollie Hankins and Jennie Rowan were appointed a committee to prepare a program for the same.

The teachers were then invited by Prof. Jones to partake of an excellent dinner prepared by the young people of Oswego school.

The afternoon exercises were enlivened by music and singing by the pupils of the Oswego school. Among the selections played upon the piano was a waltz composed by Prof. Jones, principal of the Oswego school. Prof. Jones' pupils acquitted themselves so well that a motion to extend to him a vote of thanks for bringing the boys to the front, made by Prof. Gary was adopted amid hearty applause.

The subject of proportion was then ably introduced by A. C. Strange, who was followed by remarks illustrating the best methods of teaching this subject by Messrs. Story, Hackett and Gibson.

Miss Henrietta De Bauw, a little girl 9 years old, entertained the audience with a violin solo which was so well rendered that she was called upon to play again. She was followed by Willie Gower in a recitation entitled "Mr. Spoonendyke," which drew forth comments of praise for the youth from all over the house.

The subject of school examinations was then very ably discussed by ex-Supt. Thompson and others.

The crowning event of the day, however was the presentation to Miss Fannie G. Porter, by her numerous friends among the teachers, of a solid gold guard chain, as a testimonial of their appreciation of her services as secretary of the association, which position she has filled ever since the organization of the association, and of their friendship and good will toward her as a teacher. The presentation speech was made by Prof. Gary, who eloquently eulogized Miss Porter's services to the association, and her prominent and well deserved place among the best teachers of the state. Miss Porter was completely taken by surprise, as the whole scheme had been kept a profound secret from her, but she recovered sufficiently to thank the donors in a few appropriate words.

The following named teachers were present: Alex. Thomson, E. M. Ward, Chas. Rutherford, Geo. McArthur, L. Moore, Ara McLaughlin, W. G. Beattie, A. C. Strange, M. A. Lehman, T. J. Gary, H. S. Gibson, Frank Mullan, E. C. Hackett, C. H. Jones, Mrs. Glass, Mrs. Read, Misses Fannie Porter, Ana Baird, Florence Olson, Elvira Mullan, Olive Lewelling, Emma Sturcheur, Mary Talbert, Jennie Rowan, Gertrude Finley, Hattie Monroe, Nellie Younger, Hattie Cochran, Mary Bickner, Blanche Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Beach.

FRUIT AND FLOWERS

THE JAPAN MAPLES.

Two Desirable Species From Which We Obtain a Host of Highly Prized Varieties.

There are between 80 and 70 known species of maples, and half of them are indigenous to China and Japan; therefore we regard that part of the world as headquarters for maples. In economic importance and magnificent arboreal proportions, however, the American maples take the lead. In a garden sense we regard the Japan maples as shrubs rather than as trees, and while we cultivate a good many species the two most esteemed with us are Acer palmatum and A. japonicum. From these two we get the host of variegated and deeply cut forms we prize so highly. The editor of Gardening, who has found these Japanese maples hardy in and around Boston, advises in more vigorous sections to treat them experimentally or protect them in winter. He says:

When the Japan maples are in good health they surpass in elegance all other shrubs in the garden. They like good moist soil, general shelter and protection from cold wind in winter. While the plants are under 10 or 15 years of age they are apt to be perfect specimens of beauty, but after that they are apt to lose some of their branches in summer, the branches dying off unaccountably. This occurs in our Japanese shrubs besides maples—for instance, red bud, exochorda and daphne.

These maples are in their most beautiful condition before midsummer; then the crimson varieties, like the purple beech, get duller in color. Toward fall, however, the green leafed sorts in particular assume a fine autumn hue, and they retain their foliage for some time after the leaves of ordinary maples have dropped.

The Hydrangea.

The native species are handsome shrubs of medium size, with fine large leaves, generally of a light green color and perfectly hardy. The introductions from Japan and China are particularly interesting and valuable. H. paniculata grandiflora is remarkable in foliage and flower, and being perfectly hardy is of great value. The other Japanese varieties, like the H. hortensis, require protection.

HYDRANGEA PANICULATA GRANDIFLORA.

They should be grown in pots or boxes and wintered in the cellar, and in summer placed along walks under the shade of trees. H. Otaka and H. ramnalis coccinea are especially adapted for this purpose.

The Thomas Hogg belongs to the Hortense section of the family, but it is a far more free and abundant bloomer than any other. For the florist and for all decorative purposes it is invaluable. The flowers are of the purest white, of very firm texture, and are produced from July to September. It is as hardy as the old Hortense. Requires some protection in winter.

The oak leaved hydrangea is a native shrub classed as hardy, but north of New York it is likely to be injured in winter. Philadelphia southward it is superb. One of the finest hardy shrubs introduced is the H. paniculata grandiflora, a large panicle flowered sort from Japan. It is not only perfectly hardy, but it bears masses of flowers from August to October. In order to obtain the greatest number of flowering racemes, it should be cut back severely in autumn or early spring.

Tested Carnations.

The raising of carnations from seed has been the means of producing wonderful improvement in the size, form and color of the blooms. The following is a list of the newer carnations which have been tested as to their qualities: Ada Byron, which originated in Massachusetts. Its color may be said to be an improved Grace Wilder. Adelaide Kresken is a deep pink, hailing from Ohio. The color of this variety is considered an improvement on Tidal Wave. Annie Pixley was raised in Pennsylvania. The color is a beautiful, delicate pink. Bouton d'Or, while not new, has been reintroduced. This is a French variety. The color is a rich lemon yellow, delicately marked with narrow stripes of scarlet, very sparsely diffused.

Horticultural Notes.

J. H. Hale, South Glastonbury, Conn., was elected president of the American Nurserymen's association at the last convention.

The need of cold storage rooms at fruit shipping centers becomes more and more apparent with each season.

Dwarf apples are produced by being worked on the paradise stock. They bear in about three years.

You must keep borers away. That's all there is in raising peaches. Scrape away the soil a little and put a few handfuls of wood ashes close around the trunk of each tree, and the tree will be all right.

The English and the Americans are both rich, but which are the richer? Perhaps the statisticians know or can find out, but it is not certain that the statistical answer would give the information that one really wants and which involves the distribution of wealth as well as its mere existence. Most Americans have to work; but, as is well known, a considerable proportion of English people toil not nor spin, and make no pretense of doing anything for a living. It is that because the English are richer than we, or is it a matter of taste or a result of primogeniture? So also it appears—from close study of documents submitted by Anthony Trollope and other contemporaneous historians—that British gentlemen in respectable circumstances employ from five to fifty servants and have several houses apiece, all of which they live in, and travel much besides. An American who lives in that way is looked upon as a man of very exceptional resources, but it would seem that an English gentleman who does not live in that way is thought to be somewhat straitened. In England there are 300 or 400 hunt clubs, and something like 20,000 Britishers ride pretty regularly to hounds. But hunting is an expensive sport that takes both time and money. These English seem to have both to spare.

A returned traveler was speaking of the shoals of agreeable English people he met in the Riviera and in all the play places of southern Europe. When asked if they were rich people, he said not, but that they were able to live as they did because they knew how and got their money's worth. He thought, too, that the well to do English had a more complete domestic apparatus ready to hand than most Americans and could spend a larger proportion of their incomes on travel and amusement. Houses and furniture and such expensive vanities they had already by inheritance and were not compelled to spend useful money in providing them.

Regarding the English habit of publishing novels in three bound volumes—would the American buy novels in such costly form? Are not all the habits of living that we borrow from the British, from dock tailed horses to indoor men servants, more costly than the customs they supersede? They must have a great deal of money to spend, those enterprising islanders. No one would hesitate to say that the Americans are richer than the Russians, or the Italians, or the Germans, or even the thrifty French, but the Briton gives us pause. Is he really richer than we are, or is he merely an older and a dweller in a land where servants work for small pay, and clothes are cheap, and novels are rented out by Mudie, and the tax on stimulants is laid for revenue, and not for prevention, and where to loaf and invite one's soul is esteemed a preferable thing to toil?—Harper's Weekly.

"Matron of a Benevolent Home and knowing the good Dr. Miles' Nervine has done me, my wish to help others, overcomes my dislike for the publicity, this letter may give me. In Nov. and Dec., 1895, The inmates had the 'LuGrippe' and I was one of the first. Resuming duty too soon, with the care of so many sick, I did not regain my health, and in a month I became so debilitated and nervous from sleeplessness and the drafts made on my vitality, that it was a question if I could go on. A dear friend advised me to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I took 2 bottles and am happy to say, I am in better health than ever. I still continue its occasional use, as a nerve food, as my work is very trying. A letter addressed to Milwaukee, Wis., will reach me." June 9, 1896. Mrs. LAURA C. PHOENIX.
