The way to build up Oregon City is to give Oregon City people your patronage.

FLATTERING PROSPECTS.

The Chautauqua people are to be congratulated on the flattering outlook for their great assembly. In fact it may well be said that we are all Chautauqua people, as the whole town has taken the matter in hand and our best business men are lending their counsel and assistance. The assembly last year was gotten up in about four weeks, and the response was so unanimous and enthusiastic that the question was settled that this is the natural home for a permanent assembly. The park is ready made, motor line already built, railway and boat transportation at hand, and all in the center of population where vast numbers can assemble and disperse at light expense. As formerly cited in these columns, in October, 1894, a committee of organization, consisting of several presidents of our leading colleges, met here in Oregon City, and together with some of our own people, formed a joint stock company that was duly incorporated under the laws of the state of Oregon, with stock divided into 1000 shares at $5.00 each. The shares being within reach of everybody has greatly facilitated the sales so that permanent organization and election of directors will occur on or before the opening of the assembly.

In the meantime tremendous interest has been aroused all over the state, and our exchanges are full of good words for the enterprise of Oregon City. By steady and well directed effort now the prize of a permanent assembly will be ours with all the vast benefits resulting to the community and state. Hundreds are planning to come and camp during the entire ten or eleven days. Many are already picking out their camping spots and others are writing for rates of board and lodging in Oregon City and Portland. All private families desiring to take boarders or lodgers are requested to send their names and rates at once to the committee.

Plans for the auditorium have been adopted and the site selected. By the hearty co-operation of all, this structure can be ready for the opening day and be hereafter used not only by the Chautauqua assembly but by other great conventions that meet here from time to time.

Seven different associations have applied for ground for headquarters and have selected locations. Inquiries for privileges are coming in daily. All proceeds received for privileges of restaurants, ice cream stands, groceries, barber shops, photograph galleries, etc., go to the Chautauqua association.

The East Side railway is making arrangements to extend their line up farther into the grounds so that people can land at once in sight of the auditorium. The Portland General Electric Company are considering the proposition of putting seven arc lights into the park for the use of the assembly. The Willamette boats are arranging to run excursions if the stage of water will permit.

Tax Massachusetts State Commission on the Unemployed has been looking into the professional tramp question, and recommends that the overseer in every town shall provide decent accommodations of food and lodgings for wayfarers, and in return therefor exact work, treating the applicant, if he refuses to work, as a vagrant. The report says it is desirable that the state should provide an industrial farm where professional tramps under 30 years of age may be committed and taught some useful form of work, provision also being made for men of similar age who voluntarily apply for admission. As long as charity is given indiscriminately the commission looks for no decrease of the evil, since, in their opinion, the one thing the professional tramp will avoid, if possible, is the requirement of labor.

The young man with a small salary realizes what a task it is to look after one or two ordinary trunks, and keep them out of the way of the grasping boarding house keeper. But imagine the troubles of Claus Sprockles, the sugar king, with a carload or two of trunks traveling in Europe. A dispatch states that he and his wife arrived at a prominent hotel in London last Saturday evening, and engaged a suite of rooms. When the Sprockles family had fairly settled down in their apartments, they learned that the former occupant had suffered from fever, and consequently left the hotel with all their baggage in the middle of the night.

No intention was made to do Mrs. Katie Kehm Smith an injustice in an article recently copied from the Corvallis Times, concerning a lecture delivered at that place. A word was left out of one of the sentences by the typo in setting up the article, that perverted its meaning, but the omission was merely a typographical error, and not intentional. Mrs. Katie Kehm Smith has always been considered by her acquaintances a respected and talented woman, and has as much right to lecture on her religious views as the representative of any other sect, and any fair minded person is willing to accord her this privilege. Mrs. Smith claims that the minister's wife at Corvallis did not know the meaning of the word "secular," which was the cause of the misunderstanding about the nature of the lecture, and that B. F. Hyland, of Corvallis, made the contract with the minister's wife for the chapel, and not Mrs. Smith. The Ashland Record gives Mrs. Smith a very complimentary notice concerning her recent lecture there on "What has Secularism done for Women?" and her secular Sunday school work.

One week from next Monday the Grand Army encampment will convene in Oregon City, and it will be a great occasion. General Commander Lawler will be here on Tuesday, the 18th inst., and there will be a vast gathering of prominent men and women, old soldiers, and sons of soldiers, from every part of Oregon. The 17th and 18th of June will be two big days for Oregon City, and there will probably be a thousand visitors with us, and our citizens should take pride in extending to them every courtesy. To do proper honor to the occasion the city should don holiday attire, clean the streets and contiguous alleys in order that the city may have a presentable appearance, appropriately decorate the buildings, and all concerned will feel better on account of the presence of so many of Oregon's solid citizens, whose interests are identical with our own.

The re-election of C. H. Caulfield as a member of the water commission by the city council is a just appreciation of his work on the commission for the past three years. At the time of the organization of this commission the city water works were a constant source of expense to Oregon City and were poorly equipped and a very inefficient service was given the patrons. Now Oregon City can boast of a water service not excelled by any city in the state. Two new pumps have been put in, the mains entirely relaid, and the area covered by the pipe lines more than quadrupled since the commission has had charge of the business. All this has been done without running the city hopelessly into debt. The water works from a losing investment have become a profitable one to the city, and in addition to meeting the operating expenses and interest on its indebtedness it now pays the city a handsome dividend.

The new state constitution to be submitted to the voters of Utah is an unusually conservative document in many respects. It limits the number of state officials as much as possible, dispensing with a lieutenant governor, and the legislature will consist of sixty-three members. One clause prohibits the state from contracting a debt of over $100,000, and state, county or municipality will not be permitted to lend its credit to any enterprise. There can be but little doubt of the adoption of the constitution, and Utah will probably be a full-fledged state early in the ensuing winter.

A statement published in the Portland papers to the effect that the Studebaker wagon company intended putting one thousand and first class bicycles on the market in that city at $25 each, is now pronounced a canard. The item was generally published and commented upon throughout the state. The Studebaker's now state that they have no intention of engaging in the manufacture of bicycles at present, and furthermore that a first class bicycle cannot be made for $25.

The spring term of the United States Supreme Court will be long remembered for the importance of its decisions. First came the income tax cases, next the Debs case, and then the case of Lem Moon Sing, in which the constitutionality of the Geary exclusion act was affirmed. It has seldom, if ever, happened that three controversies of so much interest and significance have been settled in a single term.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

The McMinnville Telephone-Register thus defines the financial question: There are three policies before the American people on the financial question. One is to preserve the gold standard, in which case the circulating value of our paper and token money will rest directly upon the gold reserve maintained by the government. Another is the silver monometallism exactly similar to the gold monometallism of the present but with a change of metals. In that case the circulating value of paper and token money will rest directly upon silver reserves and gold will be a commodity the same as silver is now. The third policy is to adopt free coinage of both gold and silver at a bimetallic ratio and base the paper currency on both. This latter policy is what the Telephone-Register believes to be the best for all the people of this country. It is the policy subscribed to by the people of the west and south and what nearly the whole democracy think is the tradition and obligation of the party. The only dispute is not a matter of principle, but a matter of ratio and facts and statistics tells us that 16 to 1 is approximately correct. Mr. Cleveland and Carlisle in defending the single gold standard do not speak for the democratic party. They are talking in the interests of Messrs. Rothschilds & Co., of Lombard street, London.

The Indian wards of the government are more fortunate than many of their white brethren in some respects, especially the younger generation. There was considerable comment made recently when quite a crowd of Chemawa Indian boys came over from the Indian school, near Salem, says the Independence West Side, and were accompanied by about the same number of girls; not on account of their being trusted out together, but because quite a number of the girls were so white, that, if met in different surroundings, would never be taken for Indians. Some of the girls were really handsome; fair skinned, tall and well formed. At first thought it seemed strange that they should be compelled to stay with Indians, but it seems they do so from choice and not compulsion. The reason given is that the Indian children are better treated than our own sons and daughters. They are clothed, fed and educated, all at the expense of the United States. The very best instructors are secured, a pleasant home is furnished and the Indian girl willingly leaves her home to go to school. If she were of our own blood she would not be so fortunate in receiving an education as she is as an Indian girl.

Supreme courts are noted for declaring legislative acts unconstitutional, and the Sunday Mercury wants to know why can't the supreme court of the United States get together some of these fine mornings, declare Grover Cleveland himself unconstitutional—and be done with the matter?

There are many reasons why the office of justice of the peace and the grand jury system should be done away with, says the Nehalem Journal. The cases where parties were bound over with insufficient evidence for the grand jury to convict are growing alarmingly more plentiful. We note the fact that out of about $400 fees allowed in the justice of the peace court only one conviction was had. A case from the Poland settlement, known as Cow Camp, inquiring into the morals of a man and woman in that vicinity, was taken before a Rainier justice of the peace, from thence to the grand jury, and upon their failing to indict, the case was brought before Squire Van Dyke for adjudication in this precinct. There may be something morally wrong out at Cow Camp, but there is certainly something morally rotten in the present fee system of witnesses, justices and jurors—abolish the system and have lower taxes.

The Women's Congress held in San Francisco last week, says the Grants Pass Courier, declared against the iron cage in which woman is held, namely the corset, and also resolved strongly against the habit of woman shutting herself in the house all her life, denying herself sunlight and pure air, and relying on patent medicines for relief from consequent feebleness and disease. Woman's future lies altogether in her own hands. While she slavishly bows to the dictates of fashion, or habit, or false modesty, she will continue to be man's better half which stays in the house and dies, while he lords it over creation and enjoys healthy, out-of-door business and recreation.

Fehleville Notes.

FEHLEVILLE, June 3.—The last week's rain has brightened up every thing even the faces of the people, who said no more rain. B. F. Linn passed over our new road to Oregon City and pronounced the location of the road a good one. Indications are that it will be opened clear through in the near future, which will be a benefit to all. Herman Brusse has completed his new house and is clearing land now, which makes another addition to this valley. The more the merrier; room for more. Mr. King has gone to work for B. F. Linn barking logs for the latter's saw mill. Julius Preister and son Conrad went to Portland the other day on business. Mrs. J. G. Febler had an attack of neuralgia in the head, to which she is subject. Dave Catto was doing Portland last week. Chas. Preister is a regular visitor at Elyville Sundays. What is the excitement. A. Catto was trying our new road last week for a near cut which saved him several miles on the trip to Oregon City. The ENTERPRISE is a weekly visitor here and is read with much interest. The chopping bee for the purpose of opening the Thayer road near S. D. Barney's and B. F. Linn's place, mentioned in our last, will be on Saturday the 8th of June, and the dance will be on the 10th of June in the evening. Come boys, get your axes ready for use and every body come.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Geo. A. Harding, druggist.

Attention, Water Consumers.

The rules and regulations regarding the use of water have been amended in the following particulars:
Rate for sprinkling in addition to household or store use shall be $1 for the season, payable June 1st of each year. This includes use of hose any time during the year.
Rate for irrigation or sprinkling where water is not used for other purposes shall be $2 per month, or $5 for the season from May 1st to October 1st, payable in advance. Special rates for market gardens.
Section 18 provides that water consumers will only be allowed to use water for irrigation or lawn sprinkling between the hours of 5 and 9 A. M. and 5 and 9 P. M. Allowing water to run all day or night is positively forbidden. By order of Board of Water Com. Our Candid Advice.

It is seldom that we appear in the roll of spiritual adviser or family physician but there are times when we feel justified in calling the attention of our many subscribers to an article of true merit. We feel justified in saying that Moore's Revealed Remedy contains more actual merit than any medicine it has ever been our good fortune to test. One trial will make you as enthusiastic as the writer.
