It was a reriod of constant and intense excitement, such excitement as can only be reproduced by like causes. The daily papers during this period furnished a complete history of the war, its causes, and all that was incidental to it, the legislative, the executive and financial policy of the nation, as well as a continued discussion of all great interstate and inter-national questions. It was a period productive of the development of great thought. It has been said that four hundred years of progress were crowded into this four years of war, and this was true. school on Wednesday evening of last week was a fitting closing of a successful school year. The exercises began at one o'clock p. m. and the building was pretty well filled with patrons of the school. The exercises by the pupils reflected much credit on the careful training they had received at school. Their songs were excellent, and among the other exercises was a dialogue between Annie and Edith Smith; a recitation by Jessie Porter; a irama, "Mr. Thompson's Nephew," by Edward Smith, Jessie Porter and Will Marshall, all of which were acceptably rendered. The attendance during the past three months, has been unusually regular, which is a compliment to E. C. Hackett the principal and Miss Sade Chase his assistant. Two of the directors of the school were at one time pupils of Mr. Hackett. He also claims the honor of being at one time the instructor of Mrs. H. S. Gibson, wife of School Superintendent Gibson. After the closing exercises there were two excellant addresses by Prof. H. S. Strange and Superintendent H. S. Gibson. Mr. Strange spoke of the necessity of loyalty to our public schools, and especially to our own school. He liked to see graduating exercises from any school able to adopt a course of study. Supt. Gibson followed with an able address, showing how much better the schools were today than they were a few years back. The schools of Clackamas county are doing much better than they were before.
