The way to build up Oregon City is to give Oregon City people your patronage.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

The Corvallis Carriage & Wagon Mfg. Co. has gone into the hands of a receiver. This factory was the best equipped of any wagon shop on the Coast and was run by men experienced in the trade and with ample capital; but their experience and money counted for little against the disadvantages of a wrong location. A manufacturing establishment, to succeed, must have first of all good transportation facilities and cheap power. Money and experience are wasted where these requisites are wanting. Had this wagon factory been located at Oregon City there is little doubt but what it would have been a financial success. The power from the falls would have cost but a nominal sum, and the transportation facilities are all that could be asked. The boat charges between Oregon City and Portland are less per ton than drayage on the streets of Portland. And as Portland is the great distributing point as well as receiving point for all supplies for this part of the Coast, it behooves a manufacturer to get as close to it as possible, and at the same time secure cheap power. If these men, who are said to be from the great wagon shops of Moline, Illinois, will move their Corvallis establishment to Oregon City it could yet be made a paying investment. There is enough demand for vehicles on this Coast to keep half a dozen wagon factories running, but to gain this trade they have got to be able to meet Eastern competition. To do this cheap power and cheap freight rates must go with the skilled labor and the capital invested.

THE ENCAMPMENT.

The assurance is given out that the annual encampment of the G. A. R., W. R. C. and S. of V., to be held in this city next Monday and Tuesday, will be the largest in point of numbers in attendance of any ever held in Oregon. The parade which will take place Monday afternoon will exceed in brilliancy and size any effort in that line ever attempted in this city. In addition to the hundreds of Grand Army men, Women's Relief Corps members, and Sons of Veterans, nearly all of the local secret orders have accepted the invitation and will be in line to their full strength. Battery A of Portland, with three field pieces and a full complement of men, will occupy a prominent place in the procession, as will also Company F of this city, which expects to be in line full sixty strong. In addition to Commander-in-Chief Lawler, there will be many distinguished guests present from this and other states, making it one of the most notable gatherings ever held in Oregon City. The Grand Army embraces in its ranks a large number of the representative men of Oregon, and their gathering here cannot but be of value to Oregon City. It will be the means of bringing our city to the notice of many who have only heard of it in name, and they will be enabled to judge of its advantages and of its future prospects.

NOTWITHSTANDING all that is said of the "coming women" by paragraphs in newspapers the evidence is very much in point that she will be able to take care of herself and a man too if needs be. The girls of today are receiving a far different training than that given their mothers. They are taught when mere tots to appear before an audience and speak pieces, sing songs and act parts in a manner that their mothers never dreamed of. Their business education, too, is rapidly approaching that given the boys. This training will bear fruit, for when these girls grow to womanhood they will not ask some "lord of creation" of a father or a husband whether they can have a higher education or new hat, with the fear of a refusal and being compelled to demurely await their "lords" pleasure. On the contrary they will, like their brothers, be capable, should their wishes or necessities compel them to, to get out and earn a living or to be a greater help to a deserving husband than many of the women of today are.

The Armenian atrocities have received a pretty thorough airing of late by outside powers, the press of the country, and from the pulpit, an Oregon City pastor having recently devoted a sermon or lecture to the frightful massacre. It is now most certain that outside powers will compel the inauguguration of reforms in Armenia, and the situation as far as a settlement of the questions in dispute between the Turkish government and representatives of the powers, regarding reform in Armenia, is concerned, already shows considerable improvement. This improvement is likely due to the firm attitude of the powers in positively refusing to accept any modifications of the program mapped out for the betterment of the condition of Armenia. The Turkish minister for foreign affairs, has paid frequent visits to the British embassy since the reply of the porte to the note of the powers was delivered, and it is hoped it will result in persuading the Sultan to accept the inevitable as graciously as possible.

OREGON CITY extends a most hearty welcome to the Grand Army men, who meet with us next week as also to their wives of the Woman's Relief Corps and sons and daughters of the Sons of Veterans and Ladies' Aid Society. The Grand Army is at its zenith now in numbers, and soon its ranks will grow thinner and thinner until all have answered the last roll call. We of today can little realize the dangers and hardship the boys in blue endured during the war for the Union. The courage of the battle field was small beside that required to bear up a man in bravely leaving a wife and little ones; he knew not to what trials and dangers they would be exposed by reason of his absence. The majority of the soldiers came from the common people whose incomes were limited, or were wholly dependent upon their daily labor and to have them away in the army from two to four years, meant pinching want and many hardships to hundreds of brave mothers who were left to battle for bread and butter single-handed for their little ones. All glory to these gray haired veterans for to them and their equally brave wives and mothers do we owe the enjoyments of a life in the fairest, liberty-blest and grandest country on the face of the earth.

The latest outbreak of lawlessness among the Clackamas fisherman is to dynamite the river so as to kill salmon without the delay and uncertainties incident to net fishing. While there are some law-abiding, respectable men fishing in the Clackamas, there are a number who persist in committing depredations of one kind and another that the yearly cost to the tax payers of Clackamas county is not small sum. It would be a saving to this county and a benefit to the salmon industry if the legislature would make the Clackamas a closed stream.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

An English educationalist of reputation, says the Medford Monitor, proposes to introduce into the education of young women and girls the principles of chivalry toward the male sex. He maintains that this has been entirely neglected in the teaching of girls, and while boys have been taught to pay due deference to women, the girls have not been taught that they owed any consideration to any one, either of their own or the opposite sex. The result has been selfish and inconsiderate women who accept all chivalrous attentions from men as a right, without a thought that they owe even the courtesy of a thank you in return. It is a good time to begin such teaching when women are entering upon a wider sphere of work with a greater recognition of rights the same as those of men. It would be a loss rather than a gain if these new rights should be assumed in such a way as to knock down the old ideas of chivalry among men, and the best way to maintain these will be to teach the new woman the same chivalry toward men as is taught the boys toward women.

The Chantauqua circles of Oregon City are now discussing the abstruse problems of geological formation, and the Moro Observer gives the following bit of information, which will be read with interest: The cut made by the O. R. N. Co. a few miles west of The Dalles, in which petrified trees were found, and which attracted so much attention, has since been blasted down to a level which has laid open and bare the roots of the trees, which are under the stratum of basalt and in a deposit of coal or half-formed coal, a sort of oily shale. There are no indications that there is any vein of coal in the vicinity, but there seems to be a sort of pocket of the partially formed coal about the roots of the trees. They certainly never grew out of such a formation, but in some manner during the ages in which the trees were undergoing the process of petrification the earth beneath them has undergone a corresponding change.

It would appear from the Woodburn Independent that gambling games are running riot in that staid city. It says: Now that the city charter is in full force, and the council masters of the situation, all the provisions of the municipal law should take effect. We dislike to see an interminable warfare upon an innocent little candy stand while poker games are running at various places. There are curtained rooms where fleecing games are in progress and their location is well known. It is reported that there were no less than five games in progress last Sunday week. It is probably claimed that there are no stakes, but the wise headed ones know better. It is time some of these moral cess-pools were cleaned and this paper is committed to the cause. We shall not wink at these evils but endeavor to expose the wrongdoers whether we sink or swim.

The Astoria Evening Journal still has faith that the Astoria-Goble railroad will be built, and says the arrival of Mr. Hammond will be an advent advantageous. A certain Portland paper is skeptical about the gentleman's good faith and ability to carry out the proposed railroad project, but then there are some people in this world who are so disgruntled they have no faith in anything—not even a couple of millions project.

Our Candid Advice. It is seldom that we appear in the roll of spiritual adviser or family physician but there are times when we feel justified in calling the attention of our many subscribers to an article of true merit. We feel justified in saying that Moore's Reveled Remedy contains more actual merit than any medicine it has ever been our good fortune to test. One trial will make you as enthusiastic as the writer.
