WAS IT FORGERY?

Mention was made a couple of weeks ago of how Claude Howard, of Mulino, got into trouble over the purchase of a cigar and confectionery store in Portland. Further particulars regarding the transaction are learned from a resident of Mulino, who says Claude departed for other scenes soon after the officers gave up the search for him. Claude had learned through a Portland real estate agency, that a cigar and confectionery store could be purchased at a bargain on easy terms. The establishment was situated only a short distance from the Marquam Grand, in a good location. Young Howard wanted the place bad, but lacked the collateral security. Finally he furnished a note for $800 signed by Fox and Robbins of Molalla, and gave his individual note for $600, and was to keep up the stock, and make a payment of $60 per month on the purchase price. Everything went all right until the original owners began to get uneasy and investigate the status of the notes and securities. They persuaded Howard to turn over the store to them, and told him if he would raise $300 by the following Monday, they would not prosecute him for forgery. Claude did not return Monday, and D. E. Shepherd was sent out to Mulino to arrest him, but while in Nash's store he saw Shepherd coming and made himself scarce at once. As the officer had no warrant on this evening, he had to take his chances on getting young Howard along the highway, and stopped Perry, the Molalla druggist, on the covered bridge by mistake, who went home and reported that an attempt had been made to rob him. The next day Deputy Sheriff Shepherd, armed with a warrant, returned to Mulino but did not find Howard. There is believed to have been some unfair work on the part of parties who sold the store to Howard. At least, they do not seem inclined to prosecute a further search for him, and it is stated he remained several days in the neighborhood after the Portland parties had an officer looking for him. As Claude is under age, it is believed that they expected to get some money out of his father, and to stop proceedings if the cash was forthcoming.

CORNER STONE CEREMONIES.

Several hundred people from Portland, Oregon City and other points gathered at the site of the Good Shepherd's Home at Park Place, to witness the laying of the corner stone of the new structure. The newly-built platform where the electric cars now stop was decorated with flags and bunting, and Archbishop Gross and party of Portland, were met by Father Hillebrand and the Young Men's Institute, of Oregon City, who led the way to the building where the impressive ceremonies took place. Excellent music was furnished by St. John's choir of this city, and a most appropriate sermon was delivered by Archbishop Gross. He was assisted in the impressive ceremonies by Fathers Black, Kelley, Heinrichs, Brosseau and Bolleau, of Portland, and Father Hillebrand. The elevated platform where the corner stone ceremonies took place was covered and decorated with the national colors. The stone walls of the first story of the building are completed, and the additional three stories will be laid with brick. The structure when completed will be 130 feet in length, seventy-five feet wide in the center extension and 50 feet wide at each end, and four stories high. It is expected the new building will cost from $15,000 to $20,000. The location is a most delightful one for a Magdalen Home, located in the center of a large orchard, planted by Amos Lovejoy, forty years ago on the bank of the Clackamas. The home will be under the immediate management of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

FILED REJECTED.

People who file homestead claims on the available lands of the Siletz reservation are required to strictly follow to the letter, the instructions given in President Cleveland's proclamation, announcing the opening of the reservation. At one minute past twelve on the day of the opening of the reservation, July 25th, three men appeared at the Oregon City land office and filed their affidavits and applications of entry. Their non-mineral affidavits showed that they had been over the land prior to noon July 25th, 1895, in conflict with the president's proclamation requiring applicant to state that he did not enter upon and occupy any portion of the lands prior to the day and hour of opening. Saturday an application was received by mail for a homestead entry on the reservation lands, but was not accompanied by the required special affidavit. Register Miller says that he will not entertain any applications for homestead entry where the person has ever been on the lands prior to the day and hour of opening, and he is supported in this ruling by a precedent established at the opening of the Oklahoma reservation, and all Indian reservations that have been thrown open to settlement since that time. Receiver Paquet, however, does not agree with the register in his ruling, and expresses the opinion that only those who occupied the lands prior to the date of opening, should be debarred from making entry on these lands; that the instructions has no reference to anyone who casually passed over the lands at any time in the past. Register Miller cites an incident wherein a man applied for an entry on lands on the Oklahoma reservation, which was refused because he had passed over the lands 14 years previous, while in the employ of the government as a teamster. But in reply to this, Receiver Paquet asserts that the opening of the Oklahoma reservation has nothing to do with the opening of the Siletz reservation. For some reason the plats of a number of the fractional townships on the reservation have not been filed in the land office at Oregon City, but these are now being prepared in the surveyor-general's office, and the register and receiver have posted notices to the effect that these fractional townships will be subject to entry on and after August 26, 1895.

NEW BAND ORGANIZED.

Oregon City has a new band organization, that is destined to win laurels in the musical world, if they receive proper encouragement at the hands of the public. The personnel of the band is as follows: C. A. Nash, conductor, clarinet; cornetists, A. F. Parker, leader, E. G. Roberts, M. W. Randall, Fred Smith and O. S. Olson; solo alto, E. A. Smith; French horn, A. Tizer; alto, H. C. Stevens, Jr.; alto, Jo Garrow; tenor, George T. Howard; trombone, George C. Ely; slide trombone, William Kreuger; baritone, L. B. Moore; tuba, George F. Horton; bass drum, J. L. Baker; snare drum, T. F. Cowing, Jr. This makes a fine aggregation of musical talent, and most of the members have filled leading parts in other bands in the past. The new band is made up of excellent material and will reflect credit to the community, if they receive proper encouragement. As there are plenty of capable musical instructors, who would gladly teach the band, if they could only obtain a steady position here, without cost to the public, they ask that some influential citizens secure a steady position for an instructor in one of the mills or factories. This will enable Oregon City to secure all the benefits to be derived from a first class band without a tax on the public.

SAID DROWNING.

The sad drowning of David Yoder, the 15-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Yoder, last Monday will have a tendency to make boys who cannot swim cautious about going into the water. David was employed in the woolen mills, and at the noon hour went in bathing at the rear of the mills. Several small boys were sitting on the bank watching him playing around in the shallow water, but suddenly he unsuspectingly stepped off a ledge of rocks into what proved to be a pool of deep water. One of the boys tried to catch him when he raised to the surface of the water, but failed. A board was reached out to the drowning boy, but he was unable to catch that and when he sank the last time the alarm was given, and after he had been in the water about 10 minutes, young Austin of Canemah dove into the 20-foot hole and brought him to the surface. His lifeless form was carried in to the factory building on the bank of the river, physicians were summoned, and every effort made to resuscitate him. It is stated that one of his limbs moved after being taken out, but he had evidently been under the water too long to be brought back to life, and every effort to bring his lifeless form to consciousness proved futile. The funeral took place from the family residence on Fifth street Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock, and the services were conducted by Rev. Gabriel Sykes, David was a faithful employe and a universal favorite among his companions. The parents and relatives have the sympathy of the community.
