While Oregon City has one of the best volunteer fire departments in the state, and a water service equalled by but few towns in Oregon, yet the danger of a great conflagration is more real than most of our citizens realize. This danger lies in the failure of the water ampply during a fire by reason of the bursting of the water pipe in Main street. This is sure to come sooner or later, and the Exympuse has it from expert authority that a water main that underlies an electric car track cannot last longer than from two to four years owing to the corroding effects of the electric current. Portland has had three water mains burst from this cause within the last few months. Other cities have had this same trouble until preventative measures were adopted.

When the street car line was laid along Main street no special precantion was taken to protect the water main lying just beneath from the effects of the electric current that would pass from the rails to the pipe by reason of the high conducting power of the damp earth intervening. This current will in time eat up an iron pipe until it crumbles and has no more strength than rotten
