The proposed new road starting from near the west end of the suspension bridge, will pass along the hill on the upper side of the Willamette Railway Company's track, and cross the road bed near the town of Willamette Falls, and ending at the lower bridge on the Tualitie. This road, when completed, will be a great convenience to a large number of people living on the west side of the river, and will be the means of bringing much business to Oregon City, that now goes to Portland. The road will be blasted out of solid rock a considerable portion of the way, and will be a splendid thoroughfare on an easy grade.
