The way to build up Oregon patronage.

OREJON CITY POLITICS.

A city election is one of the events that is to take place in Oregon City in the near future, the date, as fixed by the charter, being the first Monday in December. A mayor, four councilmen and a treasurer are to be elected. As to who are to be the candidates no one appears to be able to tell. Several names have been mentioned, but the parties have generally declined so soon as their candidacy was brought to their attention. As a matter of fact the voters of Oregon City appear to be in the fix of that young lady matrimonially inclined, who, of the men she could get she would not have one, and of the men she would have not one could she get. It begins to look as though his honor, the present mayor, would continue to hold the office without let or hindrance.

This antipathy in city politics lies in the fact that no self-respecting man cares to let himself be put up as a candidate to be slaughtered at the polis. Several feeble and ineffectual attempts have been made by the law and order element of the city to elect men who would enforce the laws and bring city politics up to a higher plane of respectwould-be reformers that they lacked the moral courage and backbone to back up their convictions and their votes. Distrust of each other was another stumbling block to the success of a law and order ticket in city elections. Each man was afraid that his business might be injured if he took an open hand in city politics and was content to keep still and growl at the way things were being run. These same alleged reformers, though, have been very free in their criticism of the newspapers of Oregon City for their lack of courage and spirit in not attacking the gambling dens, houses of ill fame and saloons that are in the city. Should the papers undertake this work they would be left alone to fight out the contest as best they could, regardless as to how much their business was injured. Nothing further than sympathy and good wishes, quietly expressed, would be extended to make good the losses the papers would sus-

Single factories are combining into great establishments under one head, giving them a powerful advantage over the small concerns. Centralization has even invaded the lawyer's profession and it is nothing uncommon to find a law firm of from four to six members. The flerce competition of today is the leading factor in this centralization of industrial and commercial establishments, for it gives to them an advantage both in buying and selling their commodities, as well as working their help to greater advantage, than is possible for the small concerns.
