Company F's Grand Ball.

At last the president has got done with "chasing the duck" and has returned to the capitol and sent to congress the most popular message that has been delivered since the days of Lincoln. A message that stirs the patriotic sentiment of every true American and sends the free blood of every admirer of our republican institutions coursing to the brain with delight. Now is it that the old soldier looks longingly at the old sword hanging on the wall, throws his shoulders back and feels the glow of patriotism as he did when it hung by his side or was wielded in defense of his country.

Now is the time when the national guardman will step with a lighter step, grasp his rifle with a firmer grasp, and adjust his bayonet with a more determined hand, as he feels that within a short time he may be called upon to defend the honor of old glory, and teach England that "America is for the Americans."

But with all these feelings of pride and patriotism they must have play occasionally, consequently Company F avails themselves of this festive season to lay aside all warlike feeling, at least on Christmas night, when they will give their grand masquerade ball at the armory and entertain nothing but feelings of "peace on earth, good will toward all men," particularly to those who attend the ball.

Company F is the military organization of the town and should be encouraged, for even in times of peace they are useful in instilling patriotic sentiment both by precept and example into the minds of the rising generation.

The ball will undoubtedly be well attended, as it should be, and to those who attend we bespeak a jolly good time as the following members of the company have the matter in charge: Reception committee—F. S. Kelly, L. L. Pickens, W. A. Huntley, F. Metzner, C. G. Huntley, J. W. Moffatt, E. A. Leighton.

Floor committee—C. E. Hickman, H. K. Jones, E. S. Hickman, Geo. M. McBride, Ross Spencer, H. E. Jones.

Entertainment committee, J. U. Campbell, Leighton Kelly and Charles Wilson.

Tickets, gentlemen in costume 50 cents, spectators 25 cents.

The reduction of price in our photograph albums, as announced last week, is having the desired effect in reducing our stock. If you want a pretty celluloid album for $1, or a plush one for 50c., better get it now at Huntley's Book Store.
