The house Inside was beautifully decorated with flags and flowers, and the children in their boliday attire, with happiness beaming on every countenance, plainty showed to every visitor present that nothing had been left undone that could be done to make it indeed a day that will live in their memory as long as life shall last,

The program was too lengthy to give in detail. Rev. Quimby made the opening address which was short, but like all his talks, right to the point. The children did their part well. All their selections had been well chosen and were especially seven weeks adapted to the occasion.

Father Quimby was called forward and talked principally to the children, giving spring grain them instructions in tree planting.

When the program was concluded everyto ascend higher and higher, until it was in cheers resounded from hill to hill: first, ent. three cheers for the American flag; second, three for the Viola school, and third, three for Viola school board, thereby showing that perfect harmony exists throughout.

She had spent most of her life in our midst, both while a young lady and after she became the wife of Barton L. Brown of this vicinity and now residing near Clackamas. Besides her husband and son, little Dale, four years old, she leaves her mother, three sisters, one brother, several aunts and consins residing in Oregon and Idaho, to mourn her early demine. The funeral was conducted by Mr Arrangements had been made to erect a flag this place. The interment was at Pleasant Brown's request by Rev. COLTON DESCRIBED.

One of the Garden Spots of Clackamas County -A Homeseeker's Delight.

Couron, April II .- Colton post office is situated in the south-eastern portion of Clackamas county, in school district No. 72, one quarter of a mile from the school house a good substantial building 32x20. Our district, although situated among the green forests and vales of the foot-hills of the Cascade range, has some fifty scholars enrolled, One mile west of the Colton post office is a large saw mill, which is kept running the year round, and turning out an abundance of excellent lumber. This null obtains its power from one of our numerous mountain streams which are noted for excellent mill sites, and also for delicious mountain trout, of which there would be a bountiful supply if our fish laws were more rigidly enforced. But during the spring and summer months a great number of people from the cities and adjacent country come with red and bait-box and continually haunt the banks of our streams in quest of a fry for breakfast.

But we will leave the fishermen and return to the lumber-yard of Gorbett & Sons. One-fourth of a mile south-west of the mili is the Salvation Army hall, with a capacity It seems to be an unfailing tinuing in the same direction about one-half Farmers who are behind hand with mile we come to the Farmers' Alliance hall, a large and comely building, which is and well may be the pride of the Alliance members, who, in spite of the Cleveland fully to erect it. Its doors, thanks to the generosity of the Alliance, are ever open to public speakers.

Still going in a south westerly direction we pass the Bethel school house and soon arrive at the office of our worthy notary, E. A. Wright, who is ever wide awake and ready for business.

Going thence westerly we pass farms that speak for the industry and good management of their owners. The next place of note is the Meadow-brook farm and post office, which is kept by our esteemed friend, Charles Holman, Still moving on we pass the large flouring will of J. G. Trullinger; and continuing thence we cross the dashing, rolling, tumbling Molalia river and soon view the lovely, rolling farms of Molalla prairie, in the center of which is located the lively littie burg catted Molalla corners.

But returning to the Colton post office we pass the flourishing young prune orchard of lumber can be delivered. The building is a D. Robeson, which shows our land is of a now good quality, and adaptable to fruit raising.

From our starting place we will follow our county road for a short distance in a southerly direction past the neat and well kept farm of C. O. Hubbard, and passing others we soon arrive at the mountain trail which leads to the noted buckleberry patch which extends over hundreds of acres of land on the rugged sides of the Cascade range. The berry fields are located in the Cascade reserve, or government park, which is 40 miles long and 30 miles wide. During the months of August and September there are hundreds of people from far and near who visit this park for the purpose obtaining this luscious fruit which is brought out of the mountains on pack horses. Thousands of gallons are sold every year, bringing from 50 to 75 cts. per gal-In this park deer also abound in great numbers, but Oregon has a game law which prevents the nostrils of the weary berry pickers being delighted with the sa-

On past the prosperous farm of A. Stromgres we come to the cross roads, the one leading east to Elwood post office and on through a lovely country to Springwater, We are then on the "bunch grass" road, The road leading north from the beforementioned cross roads will soon bring us to the Highland post office and store, which is any society the debate on the question that kept by the Kirk Bros.
