W. J. EVANS, of Beaver Creek, writes the following concerning the recent burning of his shingle mill. "The mill was burned down with all the contents except the shingle machines and the engine. 18,000 first-class shingles, about 20,000 shingle bolts, with all tools, belts and shafting and part of a set of carpenter tools, went up in the flames. The fire started from the woods, which threw sparks on the building, causing it to ignite. I was at the Oregon City hospital taking my sick boy home and the hired man was in Oregon City with shingles at the time the mill was burned. My loss as $300, with no insurance."
