Refrigerators
are about the only effective home protection against the weather. Butter, meat and other supplies won't keep without ice when the mercury slides in the nineties, and the refrigerator is the perfection of the icebox. The loss from spoiled meats and other supplies in a single season will considerably exceed the cost of one of these household necessities. With a refrigerator everything is easily kept fresh and wholesome, which without one would be quickly tainted and unfit for use. We show them in five different sizes at from $9 to $23.70 each. Save money by getting one immediately.

THE CHAUTAUQUA.

ECHOES FROM THE ASSEMBLY AT GLADSTONE PARK.

Closing Features of the Most Successful Chautauqua Assembly Ever Held in Oregon.

The class features of the Chautauqua Assembly, which was a very important part of the program, was not appreciated by the majority of the visitors, who did not have the inclination, or possibly the time to take advantage of the class lectures and instructions. The class features, alone, to say nothing of the splendid platform program, was worth ten times the price of admission. Prof. Boyer made a good conductor and instructor in music, and Prof. Heritage, who acted as conductor a considerable portion of the time, is his equal in every way, and an experienced leader, in structure and singer. The chorus singers had the advantage eight extra drills, under the best trainer and the leading pianist of Portland. Art received attention in class work from competent instructors. Miss Eva M. Woolfolk had a very interesting class in landscape drawing and figures, and among the members of the class were: Mrs. H. E. Ratlin and Mrs. P. J. Brannin, of Portland; Miss Mary Strange, Mrs. F. E. Donaldson and Mrs. Col. R. A. Miller. Mrs. J. T. Hayne instructed an interesting class in oil painting. Mrs. Hamill-Handcock, had a large and enthusiastic class in elocution and Shakespearian reading. During the assembly Mrs. Handcock was the guest of Prof. C. W. Durette, who received instruction in elocution from her father, and a portion of the time was in the same class with that distinguished and talented lady.

President Hawley, of the Willamette university, who has made the study of history a specialty, had a very large and interesting class, numbering about 200. His lectures on that subject are said to have been literary gems alone. His methods of instruction, too, were such as to distinctly impress the different epochs and periods of history upon the mind in a most entertaining way. Prof. Wetherbee, of the state university, conducted the class in physical training, which was so large that it had to be divided into two regiments, in order to do them justice. Prof. Shaw, of the state agricultural college, is one of the best instructors in chemistry in Oregon, and the apparatus he used in illustrating certain features of his work, added much to the interest and entertainment feature of his lectures. He taught the practical application of chemistry to every day life, instead of dry theories. Among the instructive features of the state agricultural college, was a farmer's institute, and lectures were delivered by President Bloss, Prof. G. W. Shaw, Prof. H. T. French and Profs. Cordley and Hedrick. However, owing to the busy season, but few farmers were in attendance to get the benefit of this excellent and valuable course of lectures. This institution had on exhibition samples of mechanical work, the handiwork of the pupils, also specimens of drawing made by students from natural objects, photograph work and entomological specimens, magnified manikins of plant life, and crayon and pastel pictures by first year students. Prof. H. L. Bates, of Pacific university, Forest Grove, had a class in Bible study that was especially interesting, and Mrs. E. W. Allen, of Portland, conducted a large junior class in Bible study, which was attended by a large number of young people. Bible history, geography and chronology, with short studies of Bible characters and the customs of ancient biblical people were covered in these lessons. Miss Marguerita Wall conducted a kindergarten school in the park, which was a great relief to people who had children on the ground as Miss Wall is a decided success when it comes to entertaining and instructing children.

Another feature of the educational work was the W. C. T. U. headquarters, under the direction of Mrs. Anna J. Mead, of Mount Tabor. The school of method was conducted daily by that lady, assisted by the superintendents of the various departments. Mrs. Marion B. Baxter, of Chicago, the noted lecturer, materially aided in the work of this department. Mrs. Wallis Nash and other prominent Portland ladies, were present a considerable portion of the time, and lent valuable aid to the work. In fact, woman's work was one of the notable features of the assembly.

The Equal Suffrage headquarters, presided over by Mrs. Judge Ward, of Portland, secretary of the state association, and of which organization Mrs. A. S. Duniway is president, was another place that proved an interesting educator. The most brilliant and talented women in Oregon made this a place of consultation and social conversation, and visitors, both ladies and gentlemen, were cordially received. Many bright things were said at the afternoon meetings, held between the hours of one and two, and among the speakers were Rev. Anna Shaw, Mrs. Duniway, Miss Rinehart, Col. R. A. Miller and others.

J. R. Greenfield, of Portland, had charge of the C. L. S. C. headquarters, and took especial delight in giving out any desired information concerning the Chautauqua course of reading. Mr. Greenfield is state secretary of the Chautauqua organization, and conducted the round table at five p. m. daily. The round table, which was held at the old Auditorium, was a veritable symposium of oratory, poetry and literary dissertations, short and pointed speeches on current topics and reforms, etc.

Last Thursday, Recognition day, was the great day for Chautauquans. Nine graduates passed through the arches on that day, and the ceremonies were very interesting and impressive. At 1:30 in the afternoon the procession formed at the old auditorium, led by the Corvallis Ladies band, and followed by the officers of the Chautauqua Association, the corps of assembly instructors, 150 small girls and boys carrying baskets of flowers and flags, the graduating class of nine, members of first, second and third year classes and the members of the Chautauqua Alumni Association. On the way to the arches the procession made a halt and sang the Chautauqua graduating song. Upon reaching the golden gate, President Newlin, of Pacific College, Newberg, opened the same for the graduating class, and after a few words of admonition they were permitted to pass through. The pathway through the arches had been previously strewn with flowers by the little girls after responsive readings. The golden arch, which symbolizes history, was literally covered with flags; the second arch, which signifies science, was covered with bark; the third arch is symbolic of literature, and was decorated with evergreens. The last, which is the arch of faith, and the only one through which the first year class is permitted to pass, was covered with flowers. After the exercises at the golden gate were concluded, the procession then passed around the auditorium and ascended the platform, the officers of the association going up first while the others remained standing. After the Chautauqua song by the chorus, Dr. Dille delivered the splendid recognition address, entitled "The Building of a Man," which tended to give an incentive to a higher standard of manhood and womanhood. President R. A. Miller then presented the diplomas to the graduating class, accompanied by a neat and appropriate address. The class was composed of the following members: Mrs. Ina W. Hibbard, Margaret S. Saunders, Dr. L. Eugene Hibbard, G. W. Caldwell, Charles Schnabel, David H. Wills and William H. Moreland, of Portland; Miss Metta Caples Matthieu, of McMinnville, and Ralph Jenkins, of Lion county. After another song Mrs. E. W. Allen presented certificates to 25 young graduates, who had completed the course of Bible study.

The Chautauqua Alumni Association, which was organized during the session of the assembly, includes the following members: Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Kantner, Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Grannis and Mrs. E. F. Osburn of Salem; Elizabeth Downing and Rev. M. P. Hedrick, of Portland; Mrs. Thorne, of Hillsboro; Mrs. A. J. Mead, of Mount Tabor; Prof. H. L. Bates, of Forest Grove; Mrs. H. W. Duff and Mrs. A. E. Donaldson, of Oregon City; Mrs. A. W. Fisher, Mrs. C. M. Potts, and Mrs. J. M. Boes, of Corvallis. The officers of the association are Mrs. A. J. Mead, president; Mrs. J. M. Bloss, secretary, and Prof. H. L. Bates, treasurer.

During the assembly Mrs. Alice Aubrey Weister had a fine display of masterly paintings at the Portland university headquarters during the assembly. On the last Wednesday evening of the assembly she gave a splendid stereoscopic display of her Columbia river scenery painting, and gave entertaining descriptions of the views as they were thrown upon canvas. On the same evening Edwards Davis made one of his inimitable stirring addresses, which made him such a popular speaker before the assembly. Mrs. Hamill-Handcock gave two of her excellent recitations, and Mrs. Holland sang a solo.

The closing day of the assembly was a notable occasion, and the exercises closed in the evening most auspiciously amid the whizz of sky rockets and the glory of illuminations and fireworks. Notwithstanding a quite a number of the 1000 campers left for their homes in the morning, the attendance in the evening surpassed any former day, and the closing exercises were witnessed by a large number of people standing outside

McKINLEY TALKS SENSE.

He Makes a Ringing Speech to His Followers.

"Recent events have imposed upon the patriotic people of this country a war. Then it was a struggle to preserve the government of the United States; now it is a struggle to preserve the honor of the government."

"Then it was a contest to save the Union; now it is a contest to save spotless credit. Then action was arrayed against action; now men of all sections unite, and will unite, to rebuke the repudiation of our obligation and the debasement of our currency."

"In this contest patriotism is above party and national honor is dearer than any party name. The currency and credit of the government are good now, and must be kept good forever. Our trouble is not with the character of the money that we have, but with the threat to debase it. We have the same currency that we had in 1892, good the world over and unquestioned by any people. Then, too, we had unexampled credit and prosperity. Our difficulty now is to get that money in circulation and invest in productive enterprises which furnish employment to American labor."

"This is impossible with the distrust that hangs over the country at the present time, and every effort to make our dollars or any one of them worth less than 100 cents each only serves to increase the distrust. What we want is a sound policy, financial and industrial, which will give courage and confidence to all, for when that is done the money now unemployed because of fear for the future and lack of confidence in investment will quickly appear in the channels of trade."

"Gentlemen, the employment of our idle money, the money that we already have, in gainful pursuit will put every idle man in the country at work, and when there is work and wages, there are consumers, who constitute the best market for products of our soil. Having destroyed business and confidence by a free-trade policy, it is now proposed to make things still worse by entering upon an era of depreciated currency. Not content with the inauguration of the ruinous policy which has brought down the wages of the laborer and the price of farm products, its advocates now offer a new policy, which will diminish the value of the money in which wages and products are paid. Against both of these we stand opposed."

"Our creed embraces an honest dollar, an untarnished national credit, adequate revenues for the uses of the government, protection to labor and industry, preservation of the home market, and reciprocity which will extend our foreign markets. Upon this platform we stand, and submit its declarations to the sober and considerate judgment of the American people."

A New Paper.

The latest publication in the newspaper world is the Chemawa American, issued semi-monthly by the pupils of the Indian school at that village, the first number of which was issued on the 15th inst. In its salutatory the following appears:

"The Chemawa American makes its bow to the world today, as a semi-monthly publication devoted to the interests of Indian education and civilization throughout the United States, and more particularly the Pacific states and Alaska. It is published by the pupils of the Indian Training school at Chemawa, Or., and will record regularly all events of interest transpiring at Chemawa and vicinity, as well as keeping its readers well posted on Indian affairs throughout the country. The Chemawa American is a friend of all schools and agencies, government or missionary, that are working for the enlightenment and advancement of the Indian. It starts life without a dollar in its treasury, and is going to make a desperate effort to live."

From its columns the following items of interest are taken:
Chemawa needs a telephone connection with Salem and Portland and efforts are now being made to secure it. The Western Union telegraph office recently established on the school grounds is a great convenience. Telephone connection is even more necessary.

Congress was asked to give Chemawa a sufficient appropriation for new buildings etc., etc., but it was not allowed. However some of the buildings will be erected with materials purchased last year, and it is to be hoped next year Chemawa will fare better, and receive $25,000 or more for a much-needed steam heating and electric light plant, as well as other new buildings and improvements.

Copies of the above paper were distributed at the Chautauqua assembly and several subscriptions were received.
