For sale by G. A. Harding Druggist.

While in Stockton, Cal., some time ago, Thos. F. Langan, of Los Banos, that state, was taken very severely with cramps and diarrhoea. He chanced to meet Mr. C. M. Carter, who was similarly afflicted. He says: "I told him of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and we went to the Holden Drug store and procured a bottle of it. It gave Mr. Carter prompt relief and I can vouch for its having cured me." For sale by G. A. Harding, druggist.

Oregon City's Suburban Growth.

That Oregon City is growing even in these times needs but for one to take a walk through the city and its suburbs. On every hand one sees some evidence of thrift, a dwelling here, new fences and freshly painted houses with minor improvements every where, indicating a tendency that has already made great improvement in the town and leads the stranger to wonder at the cause. Already the city has reached far beyond its municipal limits in every direction and it is no more noticeable than in the direction of Falls View addition and Elyville which a few years ago were the suburbs of the city but now are quite well built up and are now among the most desirable residence portions of Oregon City, as they enjoy every advantage of the corporation. South Oregon City enjoys the distinction of being practically within the city, as does the adjoining property, and is one of the most desirable suburban tracts, destined at no distant day to be the homes of many of our people, by reason of its fine location. The plank road from the head of Fifth street makes a splendid thoroughfare with easy grades and a more delightful drive could not be found than in this direction and returning by way of the new macadam road on Molalla avenue and Seventh street. There is no mistake that we are favored with many slightly locations all about the city but none are any better located than this same level plateau familiarly known as Mt. Pleasant. As the city continues to grow in the future many beautiful homes will be built in these charming localities. The scenic beauty observable in every direction and the pure healthgiving air will always make this section desirable.

Judge S. S. White of Portland, an uncle of Mrs. C. C. Babcock, Neita McCarver and Charles McCarver of this city, returned to his home after spending a week visiting his relatives and many old friends here, last Saturday. Judge White was the first county judge of Clackamas county and constructed and occupied the house now owned by E. E. Kellogg at Maple Lane. He is hale and hearty for a man of his age, 85 years, and when he makes his visit here, about once a year, he goes around among his old friends with more ease than his younger men.

CATCHING COD IN MAINE.

The Fishermen Set Out Trawls With Three Thousand Hooks Attached.

In the herring fishery everything is done with the seine. In fishing for cod, halibut and hake hand lines are used to a limited extent, but most of the captures are made by trawls. All of the craft are schooner rigged, and but few of them carry topmasts. This gives them a slovenly appearance aloft, but they do away with the spar because the craft rolls less in a sea when at anchor. There are no fine lines about the hulls. The object is room and stability, and while they are good seaboats they are not fast sailers. The owners of the craft find trawls, small boats, salt and provisions, and two trips a year is the average for the craft which salts her fish on board.

Out of the fleet a few take ice and return to market with fresh fish every two or three weeks, but the majority catch and salt down. The crew go on shares. When the craft returns, the owners figure up the expense of the outfit and add to it half the value of the catch. What is left is divided pro rata among the crew. If the catch has been good, each one of the 16 or 18 men has made about $40 per month, but it is quite as likely that he won't have made a dollar a day, though he has had free board all the time, and good board at that. Fishing on the banks at any time of the year is hard and disagreeable work.

Codfish are very erratic in their movements. A schooner may have fish around her for 30 days, one day being as good as another, or she may sail and drift for three or four days without getting a bite. If luck is with her, down goes the anchor, and the trawlers begin to work. A trawl may be described as a rope many hundred feet long, to which at intervals of 38 inches fishhooks are attached by lines about two feet long. There are 3,000 hooks to the average trawl, which is attended by two men. Each man has 1,500 hooks to bait and care for. The rope is weighted to sink within a few feet of the bottom and is then buoyed. The trawl is generally set late in the afternoon and overhauled the next morning.

If luck is with the fishermen, 500 cod may be taken from a trawl. They are a voracious fish, and in seizing the bait firmly hook themselves. It often happens that the 3,000 hooks may be overhauled without securing more than 50 fish, but again the catch may be 2,500. The boats of the trawlers look something like ordinary river skiffs, but are very buoyant and easily handled. A schooner with 16 men aboard puts out 4 trawls and 8 men. The rest are left to work the craft and attend to the fish as they come in.—Lewiston Journal.

The Chinese Religion.

Chinese religion has never had the puerilities, the animal cults, the cruelties and fanaticism of other religions. Like the Jews, the Chinese had very vague ideas of future rewards and punishments and of life after death. Their ancestor cult had no mythologic motive like that of India or Japan. The Chinese, like the Jews and ancient Egyptians, had the philosophic conception that continuation of life lies not in the immortality of the soul, but in the perpetual remembrance of the righteous by mankind. The Chinese could not persevere with metaphysical problems, and so did not advance.

Confucius appeared at a time when the Chinese felt the need of a religion; but the greatest of their religious reformers was Lao-tseu, who was born about 604 B. C., or half a century before Confucius. He introduced the word Tao, "way," for the idea of divinity, which previously was confused with the visible sky (Shang-ti). Tao is the element from which everything comes and to which everything returns. Lao-tseu also taught that the departure of the soul from the body was no disaster for us. But he was too vague to be a convincing reformer. Confucius was not an original thinker like Lao-tseu; he called what he liked from the older writers, and allowed people to believe what they chose. When consulted, he spoke in an oracular manner, and while satisfying no one he offended nobody.—Nature.

A Sympathetic Youth.

"Papa," said Georgie, "I'm so sorry sometimes about all the trouble I give mamma."

"She hasn't complained."

"No, she's very patient. But she often sends me off to the shops for things, and they are a good way off, and I know she gets cross waiting when she's in a hurry."

"Not often, I fancy."

"Oh, she's nearly always in a hurry. She gets everything all ready for baking and finds at the last minute she hasn't any baking powder, or she gets a pudding all mixed and finds she hasn't any nutmeg or something, and then she's in an awful stew, 'cause the oven is all ready and maybe company coming, and I can't run a very long distance, you know, and I feel awfully sorry for poor mamma."

"Humph! Well, what can we do about it?"

"I was thinking you might get me a bicycle."—Boston Traveller.

Letter Comes For President Monroe.

In the White House mail on June 1 was a letter addressed to "His Excellency, James Monroe, President of the U. S." It came from British Guiana and contained an urgent request for the autograph of the author of the famous doctrine against foreign encroachments on the American continent. The writer is a Venezuelan resident of British Guiana, who evidently expects great things of "President Monroe" in the territorial dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela.—Washington Star.

The Decline Test.

"When do you think woman will reach the climax of her ability?"

"When she can send a ten word telegram without adding a postscript."—Detroit Free Press.

A Breezy Irishman.

Ponrose Fitzgerald, the member of parliament for Cambridge, is a breezy, popular Irishman, of whom many good stories are told. He is rather nearsighted, and seldom remembers names. A few days ago he met a fellow member of parliament, Viscount Kilcourse, who had just become Earl of Cavan. The new earl spoke to Mr. Fitzgerald in the lobby and, observing a puzzled look, was good enough to say pleasantly: "I see you don't know who I am. My name is Cavan." "Of course, of course, my dear fellow," was the answer, "but for the moment, I admit, I took you for that ass Kilcourse."

The average weight of women's clothing in winter is much greater than that which adorns the opposite sex. Worth once said that the weight of a man's winter clothes averaged 15 pounds; of a woman's, 18.
