STAFFORD NEWS.

Rumors of Another Sensation at the Melcher Farm—Hunting for a Missing Man. STAFFORD, Oct. 14.—We saw a number from Frog Pond heading towards Oswego Saturday to attend the Pioneer Grange, and upon their return reported a grand time, excellent dinner and good attendance, entertaining program and fine music. The rain came quite untimely, hastening many away who had come unprepared for wet weather.

Mr. Holsworth is building a new house, August Gebhart, carpenter.

A Mr. Newman who was helping with his team to move Mr. Kuch from Newberg to the Heckert place last week, met with quite a misfortune. One of his horses appeared to be sick when he got near Mr. Francis place, and when he got to Fred Schatz's place it died.

Grapes are very cheap, only bringing 1c to 1 1/2c per lb.

Those who have tomatoes this year find the weather favorable for ripening them.

The rain of Saturday did no damage.

Mrs. Behlie has her young niece, Bertha Burkhardt, staying with her and attending school.

Henry Schatz, assisted by his brother Jack, has painted his father's house a pretty drab trimmed with white, and built a convenient hen house.

Mr. Gross has built a good addition to his house, he will not finish it until next summer.

A couple of men came out to the Melcher place with Holthaus today. It was reported that they came to dig out the wells in quest of Aldinger's bones. As there are a number of wells on the place it may take them quite a time. Aldinger, who is described in the Oregonian as a country boy, in reality must have been at least forty, having red hair sometimes, and sometimes brown streaked with gray.

Not much seeding done yet, have to wait for more rain.
