GRADUATING EXERCISES.

Fourth Annual Commencement of the Parkplace-Gladstone School.

The fourth annual commencement of the Parkplace-Gladstone school was held in the auditorium at Gladstone Park last Friday evening and attended by at least 1200 people. It was a happy season, not only for those in authority and those responsible for the success of the class, as professor and pupil, but for the hundreds gathered to witness the triumph of their young friends.

The program opened with a brilliant selection from the Oregon City orchestra and was followed by an earnest prayer in behalf of the day and its beneficiaries by Rev. M. L. Rugg. The class song was then sung with a will by the members of the graduating class.

Percy A. Cross then read his essay on "True Political Greatness", showing that mankind had been searching for truth from the time of Moses, the great law-giver down to the present day. It was an epitome of the political history of the nation and reflected great credit upon its young author.

"Our Country—Its Place in History", was the subject of an oration by Jesse W. Faubion, who graphically traced the history of the nations of the world from the formation of imperial Rome down through the different epochs to our own day and time, and won for that young gentleman the hearty approval of his auditors.

Miss Nora Elliott read a very practical and thoughtful essay on "The Importance of Little Things", bringing out many new points and showing a careful research into the minutia of her subject which was duly appreciated by the audience.

Joseph W. Garrow's oration on the "Birthright of American's" was a concise history of the different acts of oppression that lead up to the Revolutionary war and of the subsequent conflicts that have marked the history of the American nation. Mr. Garrow's effort was well received.

The Oregon City orchestra favored the assemblage with another choice selection, for which it expressed its appreciation in unequivocal fashion. The orchestra was accompanied on the organ by A. S. Dresser, a fact that added much to their offering.

Miss Myrtle Mae Cross' oration, "On the Shores of an Unknown Sea" was a delightful comparison of the journey of life to a voyage on the ocean and an earnest plea, not only for an aim in life but for a persistent pursuit of that aim.

An essay of distinct merit was read by Mattie Tellefson under the title of "Beauty in Nature". The diction and sentiment of this paper were worthy of the reception it received from the audience.

Among the best things of the evening was the oration by William A. Williams on "The Man of One Idea". Beginning with John the Baptist and the Apostle Paul and coming down to Christopher Columbus, George Stevenson and Robert Fulton, all men of one idea, the young orator showed that while such men were ridiculed and held up to scorn during their life time, succeeding generations raise statues to their honor or build monuments to their memory. "The day of the 'all round man' is gone; the generally useful person is a relic of the past. Jack of all trades, master of none, is a homely old proverb, which like most of those old sayings, contains a truth. The man who shall do the great deeds of the 20th century in any of the departments of life, in art, in science, in literature or in invention, will be the man of one idea, men whose souls are keyed to the one note, who laying aside the lesser things, reach out for the greater."

"Only the Darkness Brings Out Stars" was the subject of an oration by Miss Mabel Dollie Cross, delivered in a manner that at once showed her to be the orator of the class. The history of the nations of the world was drawn upon for examples to prove that only through persistent effort and perseverance can we expect to accomplish anything. Examples of persevering effort were shown in Gibbon, who consumed 19 years in writing his masterpiece; it was bereavement, poverty and exile that developed the sublimity of Bunyan's character; of Disraeli of Demosthenes and Job, all of whom came off victorious in the end. The darkness in our own land has brought forward the heroes whom we delight to honor.

The ladies' quartet of Oregon City, composed of Mesdames Gray, Dresser, Chase and Caufield, sang "Last Night" and responded to a hearty encore with "The Cuckoo".

Wilbert W. Garrow then advanced to the front of the stage and delivered the valedictory, saying in part: "Friends, teachers, schoolmates, and classmates: At last our school has come to a close, and school days are over for some of us. We have worked with ceaseless energy to master the branches of science taught in this school and now we must say farewell to school and our dear old professor, and lastly a sad farewell to each other.

In the past we came here as strangers, but by our associations, we have been united by that bond of friendship by means of which we assisted one another along the stony road of knowledge, and although we may part from one another, let that bond ne'er be broken, except by the hand of Him who ruleth over all.

In a few years we may be scattered over this great and glorious land and we may seldom hear tidings, either joyful or sorrowful of one another, but let us always keep in mind our happy school days at Parkplace and that pleasant little school band, the class of '97; also he who has been our true friend, teacher and benefactor, Prof. Gray. The debt of gratitude we owe to him can never be cancelled.

Classmates, the world lies before us. We are standing poised like a swimmer, just on the plunge into the waves of life and unless we make a strong struggle we shall go down, down into the very depths of failure.

It is true that our hearts beat with high hopes, and our bosoms throb with strong emotions. We are not old enough to realize how deceitful are the pleasures of this world, and how vain are its pursuits and engage in the employments of life with our whole heart and strength.

Directors and patrons of the school in behalf of the class and for myself, I sincerely thank you for the kindness you have shown toward us as a school, by contributing to the support of the school and by providing competent instructors to guide and direct us. It is through your efforts to provide a good school for us, and hold education aloft as a prize, that we have labored so hard to complete our high school course. Words cannot express our sentiments but within each of our hearts are feelings of gratitude which our lips cannot complain.

Teachers, schoolmates and classmates we may never have the pleasure to meet again on this earth as we have met today, but my earnest and sincere hope is that we may live such lives that the world may be better by our having lived.

The address to the graduating class was made by Col. Robt. A. Miller, who, after congratulating the members upon the completion of the course of study in this school and upon the excellence of their orations and essays, admonished them to duly appreciate the responsibilities they were about to assume and urged upon them a continuation of the faithfulness and persistence they had manifested during their school days in after life if they expected to succeed.

Capt. J. T. Apperson, chairman of the board of directors, in a few timely words apropos to the occasion conferred upon each the coveted diploma awarded by the board.

The auditorium was beautifully decorated with flags, bunting, evergreen and flowers, while from an arch over the stage was suspended the class motto: "Not How Much, But How Well".

The exercises closed with the class yell: Rah, rah, rah, We're two more than seven; Rah, rah, rah, We're two less than eleven, Rah, rah, rah, We're the class of '97.

FOR A SOLDIER'S LIFE.

Co. F, to Leave Monday for Camp Jackson, Hood River.

The last month has been busy times for the boys of Co. F, for they have been doing some drilling preparatory for the encampment which will be held at Hood River next week. Of late they have had three drills a week, giving special attention to guard duty, the company being well up in skirmish and battalion drills. So proficient have the boys become that they feel fully able to carry off the honors at the encampment, or come very close to it. They have also been doing some fine target shooting and in a recent drill at Gladstone park the company advanced to from 600 to 200 yards from the target when they fired 78 balls out of 124 shots hitting the target, which was six feet square, many of the shots hitting the bullseye or close to it.

In several of the other volleys fired the percentage of hits was even higher than in the above instance. During the winter months the company had rifle practice within their armory, where they were given a thorough drill in handling their guns and adjusting the sights by Lieutenant Pickens, inspector of rifle practice, and so well are they trained that now when the order is given to sight for a certain range there is no delay or hesitancy on the part of the boys in putting their sights at the proper figures.

Co. F now has 56 men on its roster and Capt. Kelly expects to have at least 52 in the ranks at the encampment, the absent men being out of the city. In personnel Oregon City's company is the equal of any company in the state for the members are all bright, intelligent, manly young fellows, there not being a hoodlum or rough character in the company and the citizens of Oregon City who visit the encampment will have no reason to feel ashamed for the appearance as well as for the military knowledge of our boys in blue compare with any company in the state.

Saturday evening inspection and final drill will be held and every member of company is ordered to be present unless previously excused by the commandant.

In compliance with orders from headquarters, Co. F will report at their armory next Monday morning at 7 o'clock sharp where they will form in full marching order with one day's rations in their haversacks and march to the Southern Pacific depot where they will be carried to Portland and thence by O. R. & N. Co.'s train to Hood River where they will march to their encampment at Camp Jackson.

The encampment will be held at Belmont, a country place 3 1/2 miles from Hood River town. The camp will be on a beautiful, level plateau some 500 feet above the Columbia river, which is about a mile and a half north. A handsome oak and pine grove will give shade and beauty to the grounds and pure mountain water brought down in flumes will be in abundance, as also spring and well water within convenient distance. From the camp a magnificent view of Mt. Hood, which towers up as though but a few miles distant, is had, as also of the Cascade mountains and the Moshier hills, giving as grand scenery as is to be had anywhere in Oregon, which with the pure mountain air makes of Camp Jackson an ideal place for a military camp as well as a place for an outing. The road from Hood river to the camp is as smooth as Main street in this city and is a delightful walk, while visitors who wish to ride can get good rigs in Hood river. Special round trip rates will be given by both the O. R. & N. Co. and the steamers Dalles City and Regulator so that Oregon City visitors will have every convenience in reaching Camp Jackson, where they can witness a splendid military pageant, for there will be ten companies in camp, as well as to enjoy a delightful outing.

The Grave Robbers.
 Chas. Montgomery, Ed Long and Tom Rector, three of the parties interested in the robbery of W. S. Ladd's grave, have been sentenced to two years each in the penitentiary, the extreme penalty for their crime. The greater part of this week has been taken up in trying Dan Magone the instigator of the crime, for his sanity, several prominent physicians, a few on either side of the case, having been called upon to give testimony.

The Telegram Monday contained the following account of the trial: "At noon a medical commission, composed of Drs. Josephi, Norris, Williamson and Carl, paid a visit to the county jail, and examined the alleged demented grave robber. The result of the physicians inquiry is to be detailed in testimony.

The defense began the introduction of witnesses this morning. Among the number was one physician. Dr. Carl, of Oregon City, who figured as an expert on mental disease. Magone has what the doctor designated as emotional insanity, and, taking their cue from this, the attorneys—Lord and Wood for the state, and Moreland and Brownell for defense—wrangled considerable over what constituted insanity. Neighbors and old friends of Magone's said they believed he was crazy on at least one or two subjects. One of them was the mortgage on Magone's property. It was held by Pomeroy, and this fact continually caused him to act queerly.

"George A. Harding, an Oregon City druggist, told of a visit the defendant paid to him. He came into the store with a prescription and wanted to borrow $10. Harding refused him and Magone then broke down and cried like a child."

Among those who testified from this city were Chief of Police Burns, Hiram Straight, Charles W. Kruse, W. H. H. Samson, W. W. Myers, D. W. Kinniard, Geo. A. Harding, Dr. Carl, and Chas. H. Dye.

Visiting Newspapermen.

THE ENTERPRISE acknowledges a pleasant call from Irving Martin, business manager and Mahlon Alexander of the editorial department of the Stockton, California, Daily Record. These gentlemen have been during the week guests at the home of Mr. John Lewthwaite assistant superintendent of the Willamette Paper Mills, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewthwaite and their sons have kindly shown them the various objects of interests in and about Oregon City. They were greatly impressed with the volume of our water power and the magnitude of manufacturing interests as well as with the evidence of a substantial growth for Oregon City. The scenery in and around the city greatly pleased them, especially Gladstone park which they visited to see where the Chautauqua assembly is to be held.

While loyal to their state, yet as careful observers, as newspapermen get to be, Messrs. Martin and Alexander were free in their praise of the possibilities for Oregon, predicting for this state quite as bright a future as far their state of California and for Oregon City they could see no reason why it should not become one of the great manufacturing cities of the United States.

PARKPLACE-GLADSTONE SCHOOL.

Undergraduates Hold Their Exercises in the Auditorium.

Wednesday evening of last week the undergraduates of the Parkplace-Gladstone school held literary exercises in the Chautauqua auditorium, suitable to the closing of their year of school work preparatory to taking their final course of study for graduation. The stage was beautifully decorated with festoons of flowers and evergreens with drapings of flags and bunting. A handsome banner above the front of the stage had inscribed on it the class motto, "One Step at a Time." Some 500 people were present to witness the exercises and they were greatly pleased with the depth of thought and character of the orations and essays given by the young people.

The floral offerings to the members of the class as they finished their parts on the program were many and very beautiful. The entire program passed off without a hitch, the only thing to mar the pleasure of the evening was a disturbance made by the Parkplace hoodlums, who exercised their time-honored prerogative by making as much noise as they could on the grounds adjoining the auditorium.

When the time for the beginning of exercises arrived, the class with Prof. Gray at the head marched on to the stage to music of a march played on the school organ by Miss Myrtle Cross. Then followed a violin and zither duet by Gustave Fredrick and son Frank which was well received. The first oration by Carl Lester Batt, who in "The Progress of Democratic Principles" traced the political growth of the United States in a very clear manner. An essay by Pearl Mabel Himler on "True Happiness Consists in Making Others Happy," was well read and showed considerable care in its preparations. A pleasant diversion in the program was a zither solo by Mrs. E. C. Hackett. Daisy Jane Rivers in her oration, "Life is Real" gave a reason why the duties of life should be more fully carried out and our opportunities fully improved. In a well delivered oration entitled "Without Labor There is Nothing" Edna J. M. Garrow proved that it is only by labor that success can be attained in any effort. Kathleen Elizabeth Smith then delivered an oration having for the subject "The Skillful Hand" which showed care in its preparation and considerable oratorical ability in its delivery. Miss Marian Bill in a vocal solo "If the Waters Could Speak" won a hearty encore "The Importance of Learning a Trade" was then presented by Fred Thayer, in a clear and forceful manner. "Not How Much But How Well" was the subject of a well written and thoughtful essay by Mary Francis Huertth. In "Vanished Hours" Maude May Brown gave an interesting sketch of the men who had made this nation great. Mrs. Hackett gave another of her pleasing zither solos to the manifest pleasure of the audience. With her theme "Aim of Life" Delight Marian Bill delivered an oration full of bright thoughts and good advice. In "Higher Education, its Use to Women" Florence Elizabeth Patty gave the past, present and future education of women, telling of the advantage that would come to the human race when they were educated and prepared for their stations in life with the same thoroughness that the men are trained. The oration was very clear, logical and finely delivered. Clark Haynes Williams closed the program for the evening with a well prepared paper on "The American Newspaper" in which he gave the early history and struggles of the American newspapers, their influence in shaping the history of our country and of moulding public opinion.
