CRUSHED BY THE TRAIN.

Patrick Gibson Run Over and Killed Tuesday Evening.
Last Tuesday evening Patrick Gibson, a farmer residing near Macksburg, was run over and instantly killed by the Southern Pacific overland train at the wagon road crossing about two miles south of this city.
Gibson brought a load of grain into the city Tuesday, and proceeded to get gloriously intoxicated. Toward evening he started for home, followed by J. P. Hepler, a neighbor, who had also been delivering grain in the city. Gibson stopped his team and refused to go on and Hepler drove on and left him, thinking he would follow along and reach home all right. Gibson got as far as Thomas Lindsay's place, near where the accident occurred, when he turned his team around and started back to Oregon City to look for Hepler. He did not get far until he turned and started for home once more, but not until he had been warned that it was train time and that he was near train time and that he was within 100 yards of the crossing. Gibson's only response was that he was not afraid as his old horse "would eat oats out of the fire box."

From the time that elapsed between the warning and the accident it is thought Gibson had his team on the track and that the engine struck between the wagon and the team. Gibson's head and right hip were crushed, while his body was covered with contusions and bruises without number and death must have been instantaneous. One horse was killed outright and the other horse was so severely injured that it was mercifully shot by Dr. Carl, who was on the train. The wagon was completely demolished and ground into kindling wood.

The place where the accident occurred is literally a death trap. The railroad and wagon run side by side for a mile or more with a board fence between and hardly more than room enough for one road, the crossing being on a curve not easily seen by the engineer.
Relatives took charge of the remains after the coroner's inquest and buried them from the church at New Era Thursday morning. The funeral was conducted by Rev. A. Hillebrand, of St. John's Catholic church.

The following is the verdict of the coroner's jury:

JURY'S VERDICT.
We, the jury impaneled by W. N. Godfrey, coroner of Clackamas county, Oregon, to investigate the cause of the death of the body found near Canemah, find that the name of said person was Pat Gibson, residing near Marksburg, Oregon, of about the age of 50 years; that death was caused instantaneously by the said Pat Gibson being struck by an engine of the Southern Pacific company on the evening of the 21st day of September, 1897, at the first railroad crossing south of Canemah in Clackamas county, Oregon, and we, the said jury, exonerate the said Southern Pacific company of any negligence or fault what ever in causing the death of said Pat Gibson.

Our State Fair.

The thirty-seventh annual exhibition of the Oregon state fair will open at the grounds near Salem next Thursday, September 30th and continue nine days, under the management of the Oregon state board of agriculture. Cash premiums amounting to $25,000 are offered on agricultural products, fruits, stock, mineral, floral and kindred exhibits.

In addition to the regular attractions offered by a first-class exhibition of the various resources of the state, a number of special days has been arranged for as follows: Saturday, October 2, fraternal order day; Monday, October 4, press day when the brains and beauty of the state, when the editors and their wives and sweethearts of the editors will be in attendance; Tuesday, October 5, state pioneer association and barbecue day. Other attractions will be a detachment of soldiers from Vancouver, tug of war teams, base ball contests, a shooting tournament, etc.

Parson's orchestra and military band will furnish music during the meeting and the Southern Pacific railroad company has granted a one fare round trip rate from all points in the state, tickets good until October 10. The prospects for a good fair this year are very flattering and the managers feel greatly encouraged over the outlook.

A Readable Magazine

An attractive and timely contribution to the opening pages of the September North American Review is that by Prof. Goldwin Smith, who discusses the question "Are Our School Histories Anglophobe?" E. B. Thurber furnishes a valuable article on "The Right of Contract," and an interesting paper on "Egyptian Prisons" is presented by Major Arthur Griffiths, Her Majesty's Inspector of prisons. A most appalling state of affairs is disclosed by Charles Fredrick Holder's graphic articles on "Chinese Slavery in America," while under the title of "The Lesser Man" Mrs. G. G. Buckler deals most cleverly with the woman question. Michael G. Mulhall, in his concluding paper in his series on "The Progress of the United States," draws attention to "The Pacific States," and Prof. W. Garden Blaikie, D. D., furnishes an admirable review of the state of "Central Africa Since the Death of Livingstone." Admirers of athletic sports will find food for reflection in the article by Hamblen Sears on "The Influence of Climate in International Athletics," while "The Problem of the Twentieth Century City" is forcibly considered by the Rev. Josiah Strong, D. D. "Farmers Institutes and Their Work" are instructively treated by Frederic W. Taylor, Secretary of the American Association of "Farmers' Institute Managers, and under the caption of "The United States and the Western Hemisphere" two articles of strong interest are presented, viz.: "The Liberation of the Spanish-American Colonies," by the Hon. H. D. Money, and "Our Diplomacy in regard to Central American Canals," by James Gustavus Whiteley. Other topics dealt with are: "The Administration and Hawaii," by Longfield Gorman; "A New Business Alliance," by C. M. Harger, and "The Alleged Repeopling of Ireland," by Edward Byrne.

FROM THE KLONDIKE COUNTRY.

John A. Confer Writes of His Experiences En Route.

In a letter to E. E. Williams the grocer, written at Lake Bennett September 8, John A. Confer tells some things that are of special interest to his friends hereabouts. The letter was mailed at Mary Island, Alaska, September 15 and reached Oregon City Sunday morning, the 19th. Confer wrote by the light of a candle, which he says was very dim though it cost him 50 cents. He says all the horses belonging to the party died on the Skaguay trail. The supplies he started from Portland with he left near the coast and bought another outfit, near the lakes. A boat that would carry about four tons cost him $200 at Lake Bennett.
"It is a tough layout" says Confer, "but I am going through if I live. There are hundreds turning back, but that makes no difference to me. I started to go through and if I don't I will know the reason why, though it is going to cost me a dollar a pound to get my outfit through. I am all right. I won't have any money left but I will have a year's supplies, about 800 pounds. I will sail in five or six days, but I don't think I will go down as far as Dawson this winter. The mountains are white with snow and it freezes some at night."
"Since we came to Skaguay about 4000 people have landed there. Out of that number about 200 will get through. The most of these going down the lake came in over the Dyea trail. It is the best. Only one man has died since I came here and he worked himself to death. We have to pay 30 per cent duty on our goods."
"Following are some of the prices that prevail here, for one pound of each: Flour, $1; tea, $1; bacon, 80 cents; liquor, 50 cents a drink. It cannot be sold for less, for it costs nearly that much to get it in here."
"There is no doubt that this is a mineral country. I can't say I am stuck on the country, but I think it is all right."

The New City Directory.

R. L. Polk & Co.'s annual directory for Portland and Oregon City for the year 1897 has made its appearance and is a very neat volume of 809 pages, compiled with the usual care and accuracy for which this firm is noted.

The directory contains a full page write up of Oregon City, describing the numerous points of interest, including our manufacturing enterprises which furnish the city a monthly pay roll of over $65,000, and the many historic points of interest, all of which are briefly but accurately described. In addition to this the book contains the usual matter of a first class directory, including a carefully compiled alphabetical list of names of residents and business men, a classified list of all trades and professions, and a general miscellaneous department, giving information about public offices, churches, schools, societies, etc. of the two cities.
The directory is especially creditable to H. M. Clinton, manager for R. L. Polk & Co., who has shown great care and vigilance in overseeing this work.

Nashville Students.

The Jubilee singers will be at the Baptist church Saturday night, Oct. 2d, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. Speaking of the work in that city recently, The Chicago Tribune says: The Original Nashville Students, who are just closing a season of one month in this city, have been remarkably successful, both in giving a pleasing entertainment and in drawing crowded houses; and in the first place they do give the most original and unique concert ever given by a jubilee party.
