All's Well That Ends Well,

"Yes," said the veteran business man with a glad smile, "Dick and I are like were destined to be deadly enemies." "It's not conceivable.

Early English Watchmaking.

I am unable to trace any reliable evidence of English watches having been made until quite the end of the six teenth century, although German and cultural college, came down yesterday to French productions were imported earspend the holiday vacation with her par- lier. Derham, in the second edition of his "Artificial Clockmaker," published Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Kelly will have a family dinner on Christmas day. Their but the context clearly shows a weight Wood from a royal household book, is oone larum or watch of trop, the case being likewise of iron gilt with two plummettes of led." The first words of this description may seem to indicate a assumption is at once dispelled by the mention of the "plummettes of led." That Elizabeth owned a large number of watches is certain.

In 1571 the Earl of Leicester gave to his royal mistress "one armlet or shakell of golde, all over failely garnished with rubyes and dyamonds, haveing in the closing thereof a clocke." From this it will be seen that the modern custom of wearing the watch in a wristlet is but a revival of sixteenth century fashion. It is said that Mary, queen of Miss Daisy Allaway, a student in the Scots, had two "death's head" or skull Good Words.
