Boy Killed by a Falling Tree—Body Found After Several Months—Killed by a Train.

Bob Gutridge and Kirk Skillen, two miners, were seriously injured by a powder explosion in shaft of a mine near Baker City, last Saturday.

A. H. Blakeley, of St. Helena, one of Oregon's early pioneers, died at that place last Sunday from paralysis, aged 66 years. Deceased came to Oregon in 1854.

An unknown man was killed by the northern Pacific passenger train while entering Portland last Saturday night. The accident happened near the Northern Pacific mill in the north end of town.

Last Sunday evening at Baker City John Mathisen, of Portland, fell dead while bowling. Several months since Mathisen took a contract in Baker City for the construction of a two-story brick building, which he completed last Saturday.

A body was picked up near the end of the jetty below Astoria last Saturday supposed to be that of State Boatman Bradford, who was drowned October 26, while putting a party of men aboard the German ship Flattbek, then ready to sail for Europe. The body was in a very bad state of decomposition.

Two boys aged 16 and 17 years got into a difficulty at a dance near Long Creek one night last week and one of them stabbed the other with a knife, inflicting a wound several inches in length under the left shoulder blade. A doctor was summoned and the wound, which was not considered dangerous, was dressed. No arrests were made.

William M. McLeod of Forest Grove, is opening up the Tualatin river, preparatory to floating about 500,000 feet of fir logs, belonging to James Lee, to his mill at Diley. These logs were cut about three years ago, but as there was little demand for lumber then, it was not considered advisable to float them. The logs are lying along the bank, close to the stream.

The O. R. & N. Company have consented to pay $1000 in each case for the accidental death of Mrs. Annie Hammond and her daughter who were caught in the wheel of the steamer Elmore last summer when in a row boat to see the Elder off on her first trip. While the company was not particularly to blame in the matter, they prefer to pay $2000 rather than to enter into litigation.

William Kohler, a German farmer, living near Corvallis, was last Monday bound over to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. Kohler drove through Goose's farm, and a quarrel resulted. Kohler used a knife in the fracas, and Goose's left hand was severely cut. Kohler claimed that he acted in self-defense. He was placed under $100 bonds by Justice Carille.

The 10-year-old son of Hans C. Simonson, living four miles south of Philomath, was killed by a falling tree on Wednesday of last week. The little fellow and two older brothers were chopping cordwood while a tree was being felled. As the tree began to fall, all started for a place of safety, but in some unknown way the younger lad was caught. The only apparent injury was a small hole in the upper portion of the skull, supposed to have been made by a sharp snag or a piece of a limb.

Deputy United States Marshal Roberts, of Heppner, was at Hillsboro last Monday and arrested William Pitmon, of that city, for violating the postal law. A few months ago, Pitmon sent a rather sharp dun on a postal card to Charles Hall formerly a resident of Hillsboro, but now of St. Helena, demanding the payment of an account due him for some years. The language used on the card was not complimentary to Hall's character. Pitmon has lived in Hillsboro for a number of years and has a good reputation. He was given a hearing Tuesday in Portland, and it is understood, made no defense. He says he did not know he was violating the law when he wrote to Hall.

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mont., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement, "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. Church, Helena, Mont.

Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for catarrh and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug. Price, 50 cents.

A LIFE FOR LOVE.

A world below and a heaven above— Let us live, my dear; let us live and love! We know not the meaning of stars and skies. We only see heaven in Love's glad eyes And give him our sorrows, our songs and our sighs. And a red rose is born for each red rose that dies! For a world below or a heaven above Let us live, my dear; let us live and love! Let us live, my dear, in the lonely lands For a kiss, a tear and a clasp of hands, For whatever blessings a soul may miss There is nothing in heaven as sweet as this, Love's kiss—love's lingering, first sweet kiss. With a world below and a heaven above And a life, my dear, that is lived for love! —Atlanta Constitution.

WANTED, SOME BURGLARS.

They Were Requested to Call and Steal Valuable Heirlooms.

A man rushed into the business office of one of the daily papers and stopped at the advertising window. There he secured a pad of paper and a pencil with a string to it. He wrote and erased, and then tore up what he had written, chewing the fragments savagely while he made another copy.

"There," he said at last, as he thrust the paper into the hand of the advertising clerk, "count the words and tell me what they will cost for one insertion. I reckon that will fetch them."

This was the advertisement: "Burglars are requested to call some night this week on Mr. and Mrs. Erasmus Brown, Ash court. A door and window will be left open and every facility offered for removing the spoils."

"But this is a very unusual form of advertisement," said the clerk, with a troubled look. "I don't know whether to put it under the head of personal or educational. What is your motive, may I ask?"

"My motive?" said the advertiser, "is to get rid of an awful incubus of inherited truck without any responsibility fastened upon me. I might burn the house down, but in that case I would be expected to save the heirlooms or perish with them. Say, young man, were you ever the victim of a legacy?"

"No," said the clerk, with a friendly grin. "What a funny question."

"No old maid aunt ever died and left you a dozen battered silver teaspoons that had come down from Oliver Cromwell?"

"Never!"

"Lucky chap! Never had a solid silver punch bowl bequeathed to you by a bibulous old uncle who was a disgrace to the family while he lived, but promised to return and haunt you if you didn't entertain his comrades once a year out of that bowl?"

"I should say not."

"Nor a great-grandmother who left you a silver soup ladle with a coat of arms of some unknown dead and gone ancestor which must be placed under your pillow every night for safe keeping?"

"No," said the clerk. "I belong to plain, everyday people, and we haven't a coat of arms to our backs."

"Be thankful, young man. You little realize what a blessed lot is yours. To crown our misfortunes, another relative died in Paris last week and left us diamonds. But I draw the line at diamonds, and so does my wife. We take turns now sitting up with the silver. After the burglars come and clean us out we shall begin to live. Put that advertisement in a good place, and I'll let you know if we hear from it. S'long." —Chicago Times-Herald

The Old Time Stagecoach.

In 1762 there were, strange as it seems, only six stagecoaches running in all England, and of course these were the only public vehicles for travelers. Even these were a novelty, and a person named John Crosset thought they were such a dangerous innovation that he wrote a pamphlet against them. "These coaches," he wrote, "make gentlemen come to London upon every small occasion, which otherwise they would not do except upon urgent necessity. Nay, the convenience of the passage makes their wives come often up, who rather than come such long journeys on horseback would stay at home. Then when they come to town they must be in the wade, get fine clothes, go to plays and treats, and by these means get such a habit of idleness and love of pleasure that they are uneasy after." Even people who come to the city on steam cars are sometimes similarly affected by the visit, even unto this day. —Exchange.

A Natural Query.

"I am getting up a little article about men of wealth," explained the reporter, as he entered the great merchant's office, "as a sort of lesson for the young men of today. Would you mind telling me how you got your first real start in life?"

"Not at all, not at all," replied the old man pleasantly. "Do you want the truth, or the regulation biographical romance that is ordinarily used? It's immaterial to me." —Chicago Post.

The Meanest Man.

"About the meanest man I ever knew," said the steady liar, "was a fellow over in Indiana. His little boy got a leg cut off in a sawmill, and the old villain had a wooden leg made for the kid of green willow, in the hope that it might grow as the boy did and save him the expense of getting a new one so often." —Cincinnati Enquirer.

Sweden and Norway find the United States a good customer of cod liver oil and matches, those articles being the principal items of export to this country.

Gypsies are supposed to have come originally from India, and not from Egypt, as their name implies.
