FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1906.

RAILROAD WORK.—The Albany Herald says that work on the Oregon Central & Eastern railroad from Yaquina bay into Eastern Oregon will begin early in the spring. The road will be built to Snake river, near Ontario, in Malheur county, along the route originally proposed by the old Oregon Pacific Company; also the construction of a branch line from a point near Prineville southward through Lake and other southeastern counties to the California line. The plans of the company, it is understood will hereafter be extended to cover the construction of a line between Prineville and Pendleton, and also a line from some point near Albany to connect with Astoria.

CONDUCTOR PROMOTED.—Jack McGuire, the genial S. P. conductor, who for some time has been on the overland run out of Portland, has been promoted and his many friends will rejoice in his promotion. He made his last trip on Friday and on the following day assumed charge of the Astoria and Columbia River road in the capacity of superintendent. Mr. McGuire has been a railroad during all his mature years. He was superintendent of the narrow gauge systems of the Willamette Valley when they were acquired by the S. P. and then became assistant superintendent of the lines in Oregon. When business became bad and that office was abolished he took a conductor's run, and now he is again superintendent. He will be a competent and accommodating official.

SOME OCCASION.—To run a newspaper without occasionally publishing an item that is inexact or giving offense, remarks an exchange, is like running a railroad without having accidents or smashups. It can't be done. No man on earth is so much imposed upon as the editor of a newspaper. Pushed with work continually, he must rely on second and third parties for information as to the events that transpire. Frequently statements are received from reliable people, but which are subsequently discovered to be without foundation. If, therefore, kind reader you find yourself aggrieved by some statement in your home paper, keep the fact in your own mind. Do not fly off the handle, but go to the editor and ask for a correction, and take our word for it, nine cases out of ten, if your case is a just one, you will be received politely and the correction made with pleasure.

GOOD DEMAND FOR LABOR.—The hundreds of men going to Alaska from all parts of Oregon will cause wages to be good here the coming summer, in fact the demand for laborers will probably exceed the supply, especially as the harvest season draws near. The Alaskan rush will work to the advantage of both the farmer and the wage-earner, in that the farmer will get better prices for his products which will enable him to pay better wages for labor. Should, however, the future of Alaska not prove what is expected and a reaction set in, Oregon's supply of laborers would greatly exceed the demand and the crash would prove serious. Let us hope this will not come to pass, and that the gold fields of the far north will furnish employment for the thousands that will seek fortunes there.

Bankrupt.—We offer for sale our entire stock of groceries and fixtures at less than wholesale prices. If you want to lay in a supply now is your time to buy yourself rich. All goods sold at private sale for cash only. E. E. Williams, the grocer; T. F. Ryan, assignee.

WHAT THE POOR NEED.—Restaurants and lodging houses have been established in New York and London at which accommodations are provided at the lowest cash cost. The New York palace for the poor extends its hospitality to the thrifty as well as to the impoverished. The London restaurant is less broad in its scope, but no less rigid in its economy. The proprietor proposes to sink $500,000, if need be, in demonstrating his ability to serve a substantial meal for 8 cents. While there is more philanthropy than business in these schemes, one cannot but ask the question if more good would not come to the poor by enabling them to earn more than 8 cents with which to procure a meal than in competing with lodging keepers and restaurants who are trying to earn a living by providing lodgings and serving meals at a little higher price than the semi-charitable institutions establish. When one man has to pay interest on his capital and another can spare from his abundance the capital needed, the former can see only bankruptcy in the end. The fact that the millionaire's motive was charitable, and the fact that the poor profited by his liberality, does not impair the force of his enterprise in what should be the field of legitimate competition. What the poor need is not cheaper living, but greater earning ability.

Judgment for Plaintiff.

Attorneys Hodges & Griffith were in Portland last Saturday as counsel for the plaintiff in the suit of W. T. Allen against James Lyons, A. L. Baker and H. S. Stone, to recover $1000 on a note, and Judge Sears instructed the jury to return a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. The note was executed July 18, 1895, payable in one year, and interest to July, 1896, amounting to $100, was paid. Lyons in his answer, alleged that he alone was responsible for the payment of the note. Stone and Baker set up that when the note became due, the plaintiff extended the time of payment without their knowledge, and that they were only sureties, and but for one year, and were not liable on the extension. They further alleged that when the note was due, Lyons was able to pay it, and if payment had been urged he could have been made to pay, but since and during the time of the extension he had become financially embarrassed, so that he cannot liquidate. The plaintiff's contention was that the alleged extension carried with it no valuable consideration and therefore was of no force and effect, upon which point the court instructed the jury.

WHO THE DISTURBERS ARE

The following remarks were made at Portland last week before the state league by leaders of the alleged factions in Oregon, which demonstrates who the disturbers are beyond any doubt. Contrast the sentiment expressed by McCamant and McGinn with that of Cake and Fulton:

Mr. Duniway, at 3 o'clock, asked if any word had been received from the committee, and being answered in the negative, suggested that it be the sense of the convention that the committee on credentials be discharged, and the convention pass itself on the credentials of the members.

Wallace McCamant—In view of the fact that the committee on credentials had refused to obey the mandate of the convention, I move that a new committee on credentials be appointed, consisting of J. W. Hobbs, of Yamhill, anti-Mitchell; F. J. Taylor, of Clatsop, Mitchell republican; S. B. Aiken, of Lane, anti-Mitchell, and Robert Mays, of Wasco, Mitchell republican. I move that these men be appointed to act with the secretary and do their duty as a committee.

Henry McGinn—I listened with a great deal of kind feeling to the words from the chair this morning. The chair said that this meeting of republican clubs was intended to re-unite the republican party in this great state of ours; that we were assembled here for the sole purpose of reaffirming the principles of the republican party, as they were announced in the St. Louis platform, so that it might be known by the republicans of the entire nation that the republicans of Oregon were entirely in accord with the sentiments of the republican party of this nation. But how does this expression, coming from him, of a desire upon the part of the republicans of Oregon to see a re-united party, harmonize with his appointment on the committee of credentials of men who are known to be black-legs and who are known to be secondaries. I do not mean to impugn our chairman for one moment. I have known him for years. We were at the bar of the supreme court of the state of Oregon at the same time to be admitted to the legal profession. I know his ability as a lawyer and I know his integrity as a man, but I cannot believe that the appointments he has made of a man as a member of this committee—a man who is known to be without character, who is known to have done nothing in this community for a long time but traffic in politics—I am certainly compelled to say that I cannot agree with the chair, that I cannot agree with his advisors, in selecting this man on the credentials committee to represent this county.

A PRISONER OF ABILITY.—The Lane county jail now possesses three occupants, says the Eugene Register. One of these occupants possesses extraordinary ability in the line of the art of painting, frescoing and decorative work. The man, who is in jail on a trivial charge, owes his downfall to the opium and morphine habits. He is master of the pen and passes away his time in his iron cage doing sketch work. Two of his pieces lie before the writer and bear evidence to his skill. The lettering is perfect and the decorative work, in colors, is artistic. The man is a stranger to this city, but claims to be trying to overcome his evil habits, and will endeavor to apply himself to his trade as soon as released from prison.

H. M. Cake—Such proposed action meets with my hearty condemnation. I do not see why the committee appointed by the president cannot perform its duty. (Jumping on a chair)—I am a republican. When I look upon this great aggregation, I feel certain that good-will will prevail. There should be no factional fight, and the action of our president should not be impeached.

C. W. Fulton—It seems to me that it is about time that we stop this wrangling, this talking about factions, and turn our faces to the front and look at the enemy there. I never expected to hear in a republican convention what I have heard here today—proposals to nominate a committee from this faction and that faction. Gentlemen, when the republican party shall have a single person as its champion, then I am willing to admit that it is but an aggregation, a congregation, of factions. It will then have lost its usefulness, it will have lost its place in history and I shall feel that duty does not call me to its ranks any longer. Gentlemen of the convention, can we not rise above this feeling, this factional feeling, this personal feeling? I say that there is no one man that represents the republican party, either in Portland or elsewhere. Generations shall come and go, with their individuals, but the eternal principles for which the republican party stands will live forever. I want to see the republican party of the state of Oregon rise above all feelings of this character. I want the republican party to remember, I want the republicans of Oregon to not forget, that they stand for principles and not for men. Now, gentlemen of the convention, let us not hear the voice of faction lifted aloft here again. I believe that the people of the state of Oregon will rise up with one voice and say, 'Down with factions! We stand for principle.' Let us all get under one banner, not the dirty flag of any faction. I cannot march under the flag of any faction; it is not clean enough. There are but two flags under which I can march. The first is the grandest and noblest of all that floats on the breezes of the air, which is the Stars and Stripes. And there is but one other flag beneath which I can march, which is the flag of the whole republican party.

Gone to Skagway.

The rush to Alaska continues and Oregon City furnishes a good share of those whom it takes to make up the thousands that are going north in quest of fortune. The steamer Elder sailed from Portland last Saturday night with a full cargo of freight and passengers, including the government relief expedition. The following persons from Oregon City were passengers on the Elder: L. H. Doolittle, George Redaway, I. L. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. George Bittner, Harry Allen, George Batdorf, L. Batdorf, James Cox, W. Arthur, H. H. Eastman, George Tucker, D. E. Henderson. The last trip of the Oregon took about the same number from this city.

What pleasure is there in life with a headache, constipation and biliousness? Thousands experience them who could become perfectly healthy by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. Geo. A. Harding.

EARLY HISTORY.

Pioneer Judges in Oregon—Judges Without Admission to the Bar.

John T. Morgan, of Idaho, after practicing in the courts of that state for many years and acting as judge for six years, was only recently admitted to the bar. The incident attracted a great deal of attention at the time, his case being generally referred to by newspapers as an exceptional one. J. H. Upton, of Langlois, Or., writes to the Oregonian to say that there have been many similar cases in Oregon, a number of well-known men having acted as judges without having been admitted to the bar. As such Mr. Upton names Wm. J. Bryant, Peter G. Burnett, Geo. H. Williams (not admitted until 1883), P. P. Prim, O. J. McFadden, L. L. McArthur, B. F. Bonham, Judge Olmstead, Orville Platt, William Strong, John Kelsay, A. J. Thayer. The four last named had been circuit judges of the second judicial district, and were at the same time justices of the supreme court of Oregon, being elected as such. The statement that these men had not been admitted to the bar is technically correct and might be taken as a reflection upon their standing as attorneys, but it ought to be viewed in that light. Under the law as it existed at one time in Oregon, attorneys were, upon satisfactory examination, admitted to practice in a certain circuit by the judge of that circuit or district, and according to the custom, at least, were allowed to practice before the supreme court. All these men referred to by Mr. Upton had been admitted to practice in the court circuit, in which they had applied for such privilege. Upon application to the supreme court and presentation of his certificate from the circuit judge the attorney was admitted without further examination to all the privileges of the state bar. Therefore the application to the supreme court was, in early times, merely a matter of form, and it is not surprising that many attorneys disregarded that step in their progress toward the summit of judicial fame.

Items in Tile Draining.

There are two extremes in tile draining. The beginner is apt to think tile drains are only needed where water stands on the surface in hollows and has to be drawn off, but when this is done it leaves the soil in these hollows so much dryer and better fitted for cropping that the farmer sees that even the uplands, that had been supposed dry enough, need draining also. Usually the first drains are put in too shallow. That, if continued, means a large, useless expenditure for tile. Nowhere should underdrains be dug less than 3 feet deep. They will then drain perfectly 2 to 2½ rods on each side of the underdrain. The soil will hold so much more water with a deep drain than it will not require larger size than will a shallow one.—American Cultivator.

The Marketing Point

OF CLACKAMAS COUNTY

The factory towns of the East are noted for affording the best market to the neighboring farmers and gardeners in proportion to the population of any of the towns in that section. The reason for this is that the people of these towns have a fixed income upon which they can always depend, and, as a consequence, they are liberal buyers, paying cash for all their purchases.

As the Great Manufacturing Center of the Pacific Coast

OREGON CITY.

Is Coming to be One of the Best Marketing Town in the State

This is proven every day by the number of farmers, who are to be seen on its streets selling their produce, who, until just the last few years, sought the markets of other towns. The system of macadamized roads that is being built into all parts of Clackamas county, will enable all the people of this county to share in the profitable market that Oregon City affords. If, as it is sure to do, the demands of Oregon City increase in the next five years as it has in the past five years, this city will rank next to Portland as a market place for
