The Enterprise is promised communication from their pen which we are sure will be highly appreciated by our readers. May success attend their every effort.

Uncle Tom's Cabin

as presented by Lew Johnson at the opera house last Saturday evening proved to be right entertaining to the large audience present, but unless one were quite familiar with the story, to trace the origin of the play to Mrs. Stowe's book would have been rather a difficult undertaking. This however may be the fault of the playwright—not Mr. Johnson.

The company's chief support is the little girl, "Eva." Although only seven years old she remembered her lines perfectly, seeming entirely at ease when alone on the stage, and her actions throughout the play were as natural and as appropriate as could have been expected from a grown-up actor. At one place in particular just before she becomes ill, when she is pouring out her childish imaginations, first to her father, then to Uncle Tom, was she deserving of generous applause, and from a New York audience would have gotten it; but her hearers failed to respond or to make any outward show whatever of their appreciation. It may be that out of respect to the sad occasion, anticipating that the little girl would soon die, they considered that applause would be out of place.

It will doubtless be interesting to those present Saturday night to know that little Eva has not embarked into stage life all alone. The little boy "Harry" is her brother, "Topsy" is her real mother and "Uncle Tom," her real father. Her right name is Beatrice Lynn and her home is in Oakland, California.

Mrs. Lynn does not make a good "Topsy," but, until she pays a visit to the South and learns for herself what manner of mortal is this young pickaninny waiting maid, she cannot expect to do herself justice in the personation of such a character. But, as it was, she invoked considerable applause.

The part of "Mr. St. Clair" was an utter failure, but the same is true to a greater or less degree, in the case of every company that has yet undertaken to represent this character. The Southern gentleman of ante-bellum days has never been reproduced on the stage and, as he is rapidly passing away, the chances are he never will be. He might have represented himself, but his inclinations inspired him to a nobler work than is usually afforded in the actor's field.

The characters, "Eliza" and "Emeline" were well acted, and "Marks the Lawyer's" imitation of the mocking bird on the violin was wonderfully genuine; but Mrs. Johnson, as "Cassy" displayed qualities of weird originality and an ability to act tragedy that in imagination would class her at once with those curious specimens of weird women found only in the works of Walter Scott; but such rare qualities are deserving of more opportunity than can ever be afforded in the class of play included in the category with "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which has evidently for years been dying a natural death—slow but sure.

Coaching Party.

On last Friday afternoon the people of Oregon City and adjoining villages were startled by the merry shouts of a party bound for "Cooler's Pillar" on a tour of inspection. In a stage coach driven by Julius Moreland they made the trip in four hours.

On reaching the site of the Pillar the crowd viewed the structure and after depositing a box containing an assortment of articles and the names of the crowd in a crevice on the summit of the rock they repaired to the roadside where a delicious lunch was served.

The party was composed of Miss Finley, Julius Moreland, Marie Pratt, Bessie Wood, Maude Noble, Myrtle Buchanan, Bertha Scott, Hazel Pillsbury, Ethel Caulfield, Laura Pope, Elsie Blake, Kate Mark, Maude Butler, Blanche Bain, Will Marshall, Carlton Harding, Winnie Hill and Jack Caulfield.

This crowd expect to visit all places of interest during the coming spring and summer.

The yell of the crowd is: "Who are! Who are! Who are we! We are! We are! C. P. C."

Surprise Party.

A very pleasant event was the surprise party given Miss Maude Kidder at her home last Friday evening in honor of her 18th birthday. About fifty of her friends were very pleasantly entertained until a late hour, when a delicious lunch was served and the guests departed for their respective homes.

Kipling and De Koven Unite.

Reginald de Koven and Sir Arthur Sullivan have both been commissioned by The Ladies' Home Journal to give a musical setting to Rudyard Kipling's great "Recessional" poem written for the Queen's Jubilee. De Koven has finished his setting of the poem as a hymn with chorus and solo, and the composition will be published in its entirety in a forthcoming issue of The Ladies' Home Journal.

Tries to Hide Behind his Wife.

The case of George E. Batdorf, plaintiff, represented by Geo. C. Brownell, vs. B. Thompson, defendant, represented by attorney Ira Jones, was brought up in Justice Schuebel's court Monday and decided in favor of the plaintiff.

For two years Thompson and his wife have been living in a house owned by Batdorf near the wood camp near Willamette Falls, but since the past November he has failed to pay any rent and still refused to give possession. His plea was that he did not rent the house, that his wife rented it, that he owned nothing but the clothes on his back, claiming that in order for Batdorf to get possession of his house he would have to bring action against his (Thompson's) wife. But the Justice decided to give the plaintiff restitution of property without putting him to further expense.

Mrs. Brennan's House Burned.

Mrs. P. Bremer, living about two and a half miles from town in the neighborhood of Maple Lane, suffered the misfortune last Sunday evening of having her house burned down.

She was alone in the house with several small children one of whom was sick which she was attending to, when a cat knocked over a lamp which set the house on fire. In making their escape Mrs. Bremer and her children had to jump out of the window. None of them was hurt, but the house and everything in it were burned. The loss amounted to about a thousand dollars. The house was insured for $450.
