AVOIDING "A TOUCH."

One Woman's Cheerful Method of Denying a Polite Request.

Men have something to learn from women in the art of warding off "touches" for coin. Women respond to such requests about once in every thousand times, but they are scientific in their refusals. A Washington woman with a reputation as a borrower turned up at the home of one of her friends the other morning with a much done over story about a persistent and threatening dressmaker and the usual request for the loan-"pay it back tomorrow, certain"-of $5.

'Why, my dear, certainly," was the pleasant response to her carefully rehearsed little yarn. "You poor thing, you! Just wait till I run up stairs and get my purse."

She ran up stairs. The male head of the house happened to be in the room where she kept her purse. He saw her dig the purse out of a chiffculer drawer and deliberately remove a wad of bills from it, leaving about 37 cents in silver and copper in the change receptacle. The man was mean enough to lean over the stair railing when his wife went down stairs to the parler with her flattened pocketbook in her hand.

"Oh, I'm so sorry, Mrs. X.," he heard her say, "but I really thought I had the money. I find, though, that John, as usual, has been at my purse-I heard him say something about set-tling a plumber's bill last night when I was half asleep-and the mean thing has only left me enough for car fare. Too bad! Of course, you know, if I had it," etc. - Washington Post.

The Coin Came Back.

"I have once or twice read how small the world was," said a young fellow, "and once or twice I have seen stories of the same kind I am going to tell. I confess I never believed them, but now I know better. Last summer, when in New York on my annual visit, I was struck with a sudden whim and scratched my initials on a 25 cent piece, outting into the silver deep enough to make a lasting impression. I paid for a cigar in the Hoffman House with the coin and guyed myself with being foolish. I had forgotten all about the quarter when I entered a Carrollton car and gave a half dollar to the conductor. Imagine my surprise when he handed me in change the 25 cent piece I spent in the Hoffman House! I think I will keep the coin now and ever more as a curiosity," and the speaker pulled the money from his pocket and showed it in verification of his story.-New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Curious Policies.

Accident insurance policies have taken many curious shapes, ranging from the penny in the slot to the coupon in the weekly newspaper, but the limit has been reached in London, where the purchaser of a book of cigarette paper is insured for $50 for a period of 70 days. The annual cost of this amount of insurance is about 75 cents a year, provided the holder of the novel policy is not a cigarette fiend. The amount of insurance is specifically set aside for e defraying of funeral expenses in the event of accidental death.-New York Journal.

The Effect of Drink.

Senator Vest has a favorite story which he has told on the occasion of many a political speech, but, so far as States sounts.

"A temperance lecturer was struggling against odds in Kentucky," snys the senator. "He was talking to a not very large audience that had been drawn to the hall by curiosity. 'The effect of alcohol is to shorten life, ' said the lecturer.

"An old man at the rear of the ball rose at that juncture and said, 'You're a liar.

"'Why?' inquired the advocate of Adam's ale. "Because, sir, I've been drinking for 75 years, and I'm 90 and am likely to live to be 100. I am strong enough to lick you if you'll step outside.'

"'Oh, no doubt, sir! You're an ex-

Why He Wondered.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A man who went away from home some time ago to attend a convention of church people was struck with the beauty of the little town in which the gathering was held. He had plenty of time, and while wandering about walked into the village cemetery. It was a beautiful place, and the delegate walked around among the graves. He saw a monument, one of the largest in the cemetery, and read with surprise the inscription on it, "A Lawyer and an Honest Man." The delegate scratched his head and looked at the monument again. He read the inscription over and over. Then he walked all around the monument and examined the grave closely. Another man in the cemetery approached and asked him:

"Have you found the grave of an old

"No," said the delegate, "but I was wondering how they came to bury those two fellows in one grave."-St. Joseph

A Pertinent Query.

The little boy was with his mother at a theater in Louisville. The play was "Jim, the Penman," and was the scene where Jim displays 65 £100 bank notes. The little boy was very inquisitive, and while he heard Mr. Eagle speaking of the pound notes he asked his mother how much money a pound was.

When he was told that it was about $5 in American money, he sat silent and thoughtful for awhile. Then he said, "Sixty-five thousand pounds would be quite a big fortune for a man to have, wouldn't it, mamma?"

Answered in the affirmative, he thought for awhile. Then he asked, "Mamma, if Mr. Eagle has so much money why does he work so hard at this theater when he could be having a bully good time spending those bank notes?"-Louisville Commercial.

As a nom de plume for a great deal of his work Hawthorne assumed the French translation of his name. His stories in The Democratic Review of this time are attributed to M. d'Aubepine. Lowell says of him in his Concord address: "You would think me extravagant, I fear, if I said how highly I rate the genius of Hawthorne in the history of literature. At any rate, Hawthorne taught us one great and needful lesson, and that is that our own past was an ample storehouse for the brightest works of imagination and fancy.' -Edward Everett Hale in Outlook.

Learn Politeness.

They hearded an east bound Market street car at Forty-lirst street. It was after 1 o'clock in the morning, and he wanted to smoke, having probably just dined or supped at a ball which was being given in the neighborhood. She didn't want to smoke and she didn't want to be separated from him.

"Come on inside the car," she plead-

"No," he answered. "I am going to smoke. Go inside yourself, and when I have finished my eight I will join you." But this didn't suit her.

"If you stay out here to anoke," she retorted, "I'll stay right with you."

He looked at her a moment, and then evidently concluded that she was bluffing. Pulling out a big eigar, he list ted it, and, settling himself ton fortably against the dashboard of the car, he began to pull away as if his life depended upon it. Nothing daunted, the took a place alongside of him and calmly folding her arms started up a lively con-

The spectacle was an odd one, and attracted the attention of every passenger in the car as well as of those who got on at various corners. He tried to urge her inside the car a number of times, but she refused to go. In this fashion the two rode scross the bridge and half way to city ball before he weakened. The anticipated jeers of the people be knew would be on Market street in the center of the city were too much for him, and, throwing away the biggest end of his cigar, he sullenly said, "Well, if you won't go inside without me I suppose I'll have to trot along." Then he took a seat away up in the front end, and she settled herself beside him. Meanwhile the whole car smiled audibly.-Philadelphia Inquirer.

As soon as the sound is heard by the neighboring herdsmen they issue from their huts, take their Alpine horns and repeat the same words.

This frequently lasts a quarter of an hour, and the call resounds from all the mountains and rocky cliffs around. When silence again reigns, the herdsmen kneel and pray with uncovered heads. Meantime it has become quite dark. "Good night!" at last calls the highest herdsman through his horn. The words resound from all the mountains, the horns of the herdsmen and the cliffs, and the mountaineers then rethe cliffs, and the mountaineers then retire to their dwellings.-Pittsburg Dispatch.

Thrifty George Curson.

The Hon, George Curzon, who married beautiful Miss Leiter, is decidedly 4.22 6.3 canny. He recently rented a country mansion furnished, but without the family plate, and so was compelled to provide candlesticks for the house. He tried to exact from the landlord's agent a pledge that at the expiration of the lease he would take these candlesticks off his hands at two-thirds of what they 1898, viz: cost.
