A Patriotic Hen.

Over in Union county an ambitious hen produced a war egg which lays every other one so far reported in the shade, says the Summer News. The old lady who owns the aforesaid hen went out one day to gather eggs and found one bearing the caustic letters G S H. The find created much excitement among the women of the neighborhood, and they quickly gathered. They all agreed it was prophetic of something, but what, puzzled them. One lady suggested that it meant "Give Sinners Help." Another suggested that it meant "God Send Help." Still another said it meant "God Save Heathers." Another declared that it meant "God Send Harmony." Finally, one old lady noted for her religious devotion, who had been saying little, sprang to her feet and vehemently declared the letters stood for "Give Spain Hell." All present agreed that her interpretation was correct.

Moki Tea positively cures Sick Headache, indigestion and constipation. A delightful herb drink. Removes all eruptions of the skin, producing a perfect complexion, or money refunded. 5 cts and 50 cts.

"His Country's Flag," by Edith Allendale, in the Argonaut of June 6th, is a pathetic story of a hunchback who would have served his country, but is rejected on account of heart disease—His deformity not being alluded to by the humane officer. He dies on the street soon after with the expression, "Remember the Maine," "The Flag of Our Country," and "Nell"—the name of the old horse which he had killed before offering himself to his country—on his lips.

Lillian Bell and the Czar. "Kodaks" are not permitted within sight of the Czar of Russia, and he is considered the most difficult man in all Europe to photograph. Lillian Bell, who is in Russia for the Ladies' Home Journal, persuaded the Russian officials to allow her to be an exception to the rule, and she succeeded in photographing the Czar so close that the Russian monarch jumped at the click of the button. Miss Bell will tell how she got her photograph, in the next issue of the Ladies' Home Journal.

On Collegiate Physical Training.

It seems idle to expect that any systematic physical training worthy of the name will be taken up by the mass of students on the voluntary system. Diffidence, inadvertence, love of ease, distraction in many directions, excessive and morbid devotion to study in some, mere boyish laziness, ignorance of how to begin and natural sluggishness and vis inertia in others will prevent it unless the work is laid out and required. It ought of course to be a part of their education, not an accident of their recreation or a passing incident of their feverish and overwrought thirst for glory. There is no greater boon for boys than to have their work laid out for them, and the word "required" has no terrors at all for them, but quite the contrary, if the work itself is obviously beneficial. They welcome it. Being a fundamental and nearly universal need, physical training should not be the subject of election, but should be required of all except invalids and cripples, with election only as to the kind and form of exercise in the large field from which choice can be made.

The builder of a ten story modern building may have the largest freedom of choice as to architectural style, material, ornament and internal arrangements above the ground, but he can have no alternative as to his foundations, and the builders of our growing youth or the youth themselves should certainly have none in the same particular.—Harvard Graduates' Magazine.

"Who Goes Home?"

There is nothing more amusing perhaps in all the quaint and curious customs of the house of commons than the strange ceremony which marks the termination of its every sitting. The moment the house is adjourned stentorian voiced messengers and policemen cry out in the lobbies and corridors, "Who goes home?" These mysterious words have sounded every night for centuries through the palace of Westminster. The custom dates from a time when it was necessary for members to go home in parties accompanied by linksmen for common protection against the footpads who infested the streets of London. But though that danger has long since passed away the question, "Who goes home?" is still asked night after night during the session of parliament. No reply is given, and none is expected.—Nineteenth Century.

The Pope's Titles.

These are the titles in full of the Roman pontiff: "His holiness Leo XIII, bishop of Rome, vicar of Jesus Christ, two hundred and fifty-eighth successor of the prince of apostles, supreme pontiff of the church universal, patriarch of the west, primate of Italy, archbishop and metropolitan of the Roman province, sovereign of the temporal dominions of the holy Roman church, prefect of the sacred congregations of the inquisition, the consistory of the apostolic visit, president of the pontifical commission for the reunion of dissenting churches and protector of the church and chapter of St. Peter and St. Paul, and of the orders of St. Benedict, of preachers, of the Friars Minor and also of the archdioceses of the Via Crucis, of Jesus and Mary and of the Stigmata of St. Francis."

Not His Department.

"I should think you would find this a very trying position," remarked the horrified visitor at the stockyards, gazing with a kind of hideous fascination at the gory artist whose business it was to silence the squealing porkers as they "trilled" past him, heads downward. "Trying?" answered the pig sticker. "Great Scott, no! The trying positions are all in the renderin houses." And he silenced another pig.—Chicago Tribune.

He Wanted Too Much.

Patient—Well, doctor, do you think it's appendicitis? Eminent Surgeon—I never think, my friend; I always know. Patient—Yes, I know you always know after the operation, but can't you break over the rule and work up a little doubt now?—Chicago News.

Best Side of a Cemetery.

Probably few people know that there is a choice side to every cemetery. Thus, in some parts of the world, the eastern portion, without regard to its situation, is always deemed the most desirable. This preference arises from the old tradition that our Lord will appear from the east. It is also believed that the dead in the eastern portion will be the first to rise, then those in the southern, western and northern in order.

In England it was once the custom of laying felons and other bad characters on the north side of the church. The custom of laying the dead in a certain direction is responsible for the Welsh denigration for the east wind, "The wind of the dead men's feet."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Comedy of Divorce.

Mrs. Lincoln Parke—Delighted to make your acquaintance, Mr. Englewood. It almost seems as if I had met you before.

Mr. Englewood—My memory is better than yours, my dear madam. You were once my wife.

Mrs. L. P.—Are you sure? Mr. E.—Quite! Mrs. L. P.—Probably you are right. I never could remember faces.—New York Herald.

The republic of Uruguay has more newspapers in proportion to its population than any country in the world.

Hunting in the Burning Bushes of Texas.

A Southern Pacific advertising man says: "Saul, after his conversion, hadn't half the respect for burning bushes that I have since my return from a trip to west Texas. That country is the blanketed place for natural curiosities that I ever went up against, and my little introduction to the 'fire bush' came near leaving me in a state of nervous prostration."

"I went out one morning from Dr. Merriwether's ranch with my Winchester on my shoulder to shoot a few jack rabbits for practice. I climbed up on a little plateau where the alkali was thicker than paint on a soubrette and had trailed along for a couple of hours without seeing anything when a big yellow bird, like a pheasant, chucked at me from beneath a bush at the side of the ravine. The creature was so friendly that I thought I could bat him over or perhaps catch him alive. I leaped at him and when he 'side stepped' I fell into the bush. As I scrambled to my feet I was flabbergasted to find that brown shrub burning merrily beside me. I had just time to dodge the flame and in doing so I struck another plant of the same variety. In an instant, with a little swish, it, too, sprang into flame. I turned, horror stricken, to run, and dashed straight into a third shrub, which at once took part in the conflagration. At that I lost my head, and dropping my gun, I sprang away frantically through the undergrowth, leaving behind me a trail of fire like a comet's tail. I don't know just how far I ran, but at last, exhausted, I fell to the ground and in a few moments the bushes ceased to burn. When sufficiently recovered, I crawled carefully to the trail, giving anything that looked bushy and brown a wide berth.

"And Merriwether only laughed as he told me that the 'fire bush' is a species of cactus which at a certain period of the year will take fire by spontaneous combustion when violently shaken, as by some one running through them."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Indian Irrigating Tanks.

The system of irrigation is mostly that known as the ancient Hindoo system of tanks. The word "tank," in an Indian irrigation sense, means a storage reservoir. A tank has no definite size. Its area of water spread may be two or three acres or it may extend to as many square miles; its depth may be three or four feet or 100 feet or more.

The word "koonka" is used in Hindurabad to signify a very small tank, such as one of two or three acres only. The words "sango" and "cherroo" are the Hindoostanee and Telugu equivalents, respectively, of the word that has been copied into English as "tank."

Down every valley a stream must flow in the rainy season, its size depending upon the area of the ground that drains into it. A small stream is a feeder, or one of several feeders, to a larger stream, whose drainage area is the total of those of its small stream feeders. The larger stream is, again, but a feeder to one still larger, and so on till the great river is reached that carries the water from the whole accumulated drainage areas to the sea. In each little valley, in each larger valley, in each yet larger valley again, one or more tanks can be constructed, and thus the drainage area supplying a tank may vary from less than one square mile to 100 square miles.—George Palmer in Engineering Magazine.

Advice on Pruning.

If pruning is done properly, no tools will ever be necessary except a sharp pruning knife, but if neglected or too many main limbs are allowed to grow the saw will have to be used in a few years. It is desirable to make a nice, smooth, even cut, and to do this the knife should follow the shoulder that is noticeable at the junction of the limb to another or to the main stem, and the surface of the cut should be no larger than the base of the branch removed. Draw the blade inward a little at the upper side. Avoid leaving a sharp stub from which a new shoot may start. Do not make the cut too close. When the saw must be used on a heavy limb, saw a little on the underside first, so that the weight of the limb as it falls will not split or peel the bark. It is necessary to paint the wound made by pruning with white lead and linsed oil, to which may be added a little lampblack, if desired, to give a darker effect.—Report Colorado Board of Horticulture.

Imitation.

Irate Father—'I'm getting tired of this nonsense. You've been engaged to that young man for six months. Does he ever intend to marry you?

Daughter—You must have patience, papa. Remember, he's an actor.

Father—What's that got to do with it?

Daughter—He's full of long engagements.—London Fun.

Queen Wilhelmina's Oath.

The coronation of the young queen of Holland will take place, according to a recently published decree, on Sept. 6. On that day the young woman, with right hand raised, in the presence of the states general, will pledge herself to the following formula, which is a strange contrast to the oaths administered to the Russian and German emperors:

"I swear to the people of the Netherlands to observe and always maintain the fundamental law. I pledge myself to defend and to preserve with all my power the independence of the kingdom, to protect public and private liberty and the rights of all my subjects and to employ for the preservation and advancement of individual and general prosperity all the means which the laws place at my disposal as the due of an upright queen. And may God aid me in my work."

Ayer's Pills

Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills are a specific for all diseases of the liver, stomach, and bowels.

"I suffered from constipation which assumed such an obstinate form that I feared it would cause a stoppage of the bowels. After vainly trying various remedies, I began to take Ayer's Pills. Two boxes effected a complete cure."

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels recovered their natural action."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Modern Agnostic.

We look at our churches with their congregations, growing in numbers and dwindling in faith, says H. G. Chapman in The Atlantic, and we ask ourselves: In all these buildings, cheap or costly, what real prayers rise, and of those that rise do any get above the roof? What God hears them and has there ever been an answered prayer? We look at the face of the dead and repeat a burial service. If after the manner of men I have fought with hosts at Ephesus, what advantage it me if the dead rise not? And as we say the words we ask ourselves, "Do the dead rise?" And if any one is found who believes these things he knows that there is another at his elbow who believes them not a whit or an atom, and these two can hit on no universe that shall satisfy both, nor can one be poet to the other.

Suspicion.

"Do you remember that girl who came here and said that what she most desired was a good home?" asked the housewife.

"What is the matter now?" responded her husband. "Have you missed something else?"

"Yes, I guess she has a good home pretty nearly paid for by this time."—Washington Star.
