unid. Mrs. Gray-H'm! That's a way she has of currying favor. - Boston TranA SCENE ON THE SOO.

The King of France Took Possession of the Land Two Hundred Years Ago.

In St. Nicholas there is an article on "The Great Lakes" by W. S. Harwood.

Mr. Harwood says: While waiting for my steamer to be carried through canal locks of the Soo, I stood one summer day near a bill on which now stands Fort Brady, overlooking the rapids of the Soo as they flow from Lake Superior down into the St. Mary's river and so on to join at last the waters of Huron. On the top of this bill, as nearly as I could decide from the topography of the country, was witnessed two centuries and a quarter ago one of the most remarkable, one of the most significant, scenes in the mention it.

On June 14, 1671, a strange body of men was assembled on this bill. It was composed of four classes—the official representatives of the king of France, the Catholic missionaries, the voyageurs and the Indiana. Weeks before word had been sent out to the chiefs of 14 of Our baby has been continually troubled the different tribes of Indians in the regraved plate on it was set up near the deep hole in the ground which was to hold the foot of the cross.

When all had assembled, St. Lusson, the representative of the king, lifted in of his most Christian majesty the king of France took possession of the land, embracing in his assumption "all the Bids will be received by the under- region from the north to the south sea The cross was then raised before the motley throng-the representatives of the government in their most gorgeous toned a stately chant of the seventeenth century. Then the French exclaimed "Vive le roi!" while, as one historian puts it, "the Indians howled in concert."

The plate upon the smaller timber bore an engraved inscription denoting the king's possession of the land.

A SCENE IN SALONICA.

The Jews and Jewesses That Inhabit the Heart of the Town

In the true ghetto, in the noisome heart of the town, where the cobbled streets run slimy and the people chaffer his beels and the fez of his masters. If he is well to do, the garment may be fur bordered or it may be of silk, but it could not more surely be soiled and greasy if the law required it so. With marriage this survivor of the dark ages Sealed bids will be received at the grows a beard full and thick and grizbut sent no representatives abroad.

These Jewesses love display and court admiration. They are much fairer than the men, milky skinned, with a pale pink flush, as if they were bothouse bred. Their clothes are gay, red, green and blue being their favorite colors, and the married women all wear decollete bodices fashioned very low in front and showing a fancy shirt of embroidery and lace, which either reveals the mold of their forms or makes startling exposures of the forms themselves. Their chests are always quite bare. This in a land where the other women expose nothing but their eyes is all the more astonishing. On their crowns the Jewish matrons wear very showy, often beautiful, headdresses, composed of a cap of red, green and yellow silk or cloth, that is carried down the back of the head in a bag that envelops their tresses. Often these bags are finished at the bottom with beavy gold braid .-'In the Wake of a War," by Julian Ralph, in Harper's Magazine.

Equal to the Occasion.

They tell this story in London about the Countess Waldegrave, who was married four times: One evening she appeared at the opera in Dublin during her fourth husband's occupancy of the post of chief secretary for Ireland. An audacious Celt, catching sight of her ladyship in one of the boxes, shouted out with real Irish temerity, "Lady Waldegrave, which of the four did you like best?"

The countess was equal to the occasion. Without a moment's hesitation she rose from her seat and exclaimed enthusiastically, "Why, the Irishman, of course"-a remark which naturally "brought down the house."

A New Road Found. "Oh, John, dear, isn't your Uncle George dreadful?"

"What's up now?" "Why, I called at his office today, and he was talking to one of his clerks up stairs."

'Nothing unusual in that." "And, John, he told the poor man to go to-you know where-through the speaking tube."-Pick Me Up.

In the markets of Brazil one often sees live snakes—a species of boa—from 10 to 15 feet long. They are employed in many houses to hunt rats at night, being otherwise perfectly harmless. They become attached to a house like a ent or a dog.

BEGGING EASIER THAN WORK

At Least That's Why One Man Sold Out &

I once got a rather curious confession from a professional beggar, which if true, and I believe it was, opened my eyes to the reckless ways in which American beggars are made. "I had been keeping a sidewalk stand for years," said he. "I worked hard and earned from $3 to $4 a week. On that I lived. One night when I started to go home by the Mission street cars I found that my pocket had been picked. It was too far to walk, so I decided to borrow a nickel. The first man to whom I told my story gave me a quarter without besitation. All the way home I thought it over. A quarter was as much as I made clear at my stand many a day. It all ended by my selling out and going to begging, always telling my first story. I have done pretty well since then and like the business.

One day I met him in Union square "How's business?" I asked. He was leaning against a tree, deeply intent on some figures in a book. He slipped the book into his pocket and began to whine.

"Never mind your regular story," I said, "I know it. Answer my question like a man, and you may add a dollar to your bank account."

After a little preliminary skirmishing be waxed confidential.

"I make it a rule," be said, "never to walk less than 100 blocks each day, It is a very poor block that doesn't average 216 cents. Two blocks will more often net me 10 cents." He consulted the book. "Yes, the average of the last six months is $5 a day-that is, just 5 cents a block. I have been on this beat nearly a year now, and I have my regular customers. Excuse me a minute.

He passed through the fog to the other side of the street and touched his has to an elderly acquaintance of mine whe was coming down the broad steps of the Pacific Union club. In a moment be returned with a bright new quarter in

"I told him my wife was better today," be said, smiling pleasantly, "and that she prayed for him night and day. Well, so long! Your dollar passes the limit today-and business is over."

Can you blame bim? Five dollars a day is the wages of a first class meeting. Why should not tegging become a profession when people are such easy game?-Overland Monthly.

Disraell's Manner.

I have no doubt Disraeli loses friends by his apparent insonciance and the method in which he walks to his place -without looking at anybody-but I surmise from my own experience that it arises from nearsightedness. I perceive that he cannot tell what o'clock it is without using his glass, and somebody told me lately that he saw him hailing a police van, mistaking it for an omnibus. His face is often baggard and his air weary and disappointed, but he has the brow and eyes of a poet, which are always pleasant to look upon. He generally says the right thing at the right minute and in the right way, and he is lustily cheered, but sitting among the opposition I have abundant reason to note that he is not completely trusted. It is said that young Stanley and other youngsters of his class believe in him and that the man who is so taciturn in parliament is a charming companion among his familiars and is a gracious and genial bost. Some of his postprandial mots steal out and, I should think, make fatal enemies. Somebody asked him lately if Lord Robert M. was not a stupid ass, "No, no," said Benjamin, "not at all; he is a clever ass."-"My Life In Two Hemispheres," Sir Charles Gavan Duffy.

This is how Zola is described by Stuart Henry in "Hours With Famous Parisians:" A business man, no emo-tion, no ideals, no imagination, no poetry, in his personal intercourse. He does not try to win or entertain you. He takes no personal interest in you and does not expect you to take any personal interest in him. He talks frankly and freely about everything. but in a secular way. He makes life seem to you merely a commercial career. Fiction for him is editions of 100,000 francs a year. His magisterial and magnificent panoramas of descriptions, unequaled for their kind, are all measured off in his mind as so many rods of printed matter at so much a rod. No personal magnetism, no sentiment, no perfume, no rose colors. Life has been for him a blunt, rude, brutish thing. He has conquered merely because he has worked harder than any one else. With him naturalistic literature succeeds only by the sweat of the brow. What loins of strength nevertheless! What Titanio capacities to achieve! He towers over all his Parisian contemporaries, as Victor Hugo towered over his epoch.

The Elephant Corps.

An English newspaper, in an article on the Siamese army, says: "In one re spect the Siamese army is superior to every other, and that is in its elephant corps. Eight hundred of these animals, which are stronger, though smaller, than those of India, are organized into a special corps, commanded by a retired Anglo-Indian officer, and their heads, trunks and other vulnerable parts are protected against bullets by india rubber armor. "

A Costly Dish.

"Ob, mamma, do Christians eat preachers just like the cannibals do?" "Why, no, my child. What put that notion into your head?"

"I heard Mrs. Deekon say this morning that she was going to have her minister for lunch."—Brooklyn Life.

It Costs Nothing.

Thackeray tells of a lord who never saw a vacant place on his estate, but he took an acorn out of his pocket and dropped it in. Never lose a chance of saying a kind word, of doing a kindly act. It costs nothing.
