J. A. Moore workman on the electric line for assault on Mrs. John Moore, plead guilty and was fined $25 and went to jail in default of paying the same.

Fred Moehke was arraigned in the Justice court Tuesday on a charge of driving a steam traction engine over a culvert on pieces of plank under the wheels of the engine to secure the safety of the culvert as the law requires. Defendant entered a plea of guilty and was fined $10.00. G. B. Dimick appeared as counsel for the state.

FROM LIEUTENANT HUNTLEY.

Through the Kindness of Mrs. W. A. Huntley we Publish the Following.

CAVITE, ARSENAL, PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

And now I will answer the questions in those last letters: The night cap to keep out bugs is needed. I never saw such monstrous bugs, to say nothing of lizards and such other wild things. Cockroaches are fully three inches long and broad in proportion. To illustrate the omnipresence, we had a can of blackberry jam, a small can, and very poorly opened by slits across the top which were pressed together after each meal to close it. The tin being stiff, I was in the habit of raising part of the top a little way and slipping in the spoon through the small opening. This particular morning we had some very good coiled rice of which I fixed up a big plate full in a manner to tempt an epicure. A generous allowance of sugar, butter and condensed cream being properly fitted to it, I proceeded to cover the whole with the blackberry jam. I had the whole thing ready and was just about to lift a delicious spoonful to my mouth, when from the slit in the top of the jam can crawled a woe-begone jam-struck cockroach fully three inches long. But it takes more than that to spoil a soldier's appetite.

You should hear the storm of groans and excretions that arise when any body begins to talk about Oregon fruit. You can't imagine the longing for the tart or acid fruits that come to a man living onhardtack, bacon and rice. Oh! for the cherries, the strawberries, the raspberries of the Willamette valley.

You have listened to many a dissertation on the beauties of tropical fruits, especially when eaten in their own home; but let me say that tropical fruits are all to read and rave about, but for eating, give me the semi-tropical and the temperate. In the first place, we are all well frightened about eating it at all, and then much of it is not palatable to a foreigner. Bananas are perfect; there are several varieties that I never saw before—creamy yellow and very rich. I eat bananas temperately and like them but I would give a wagon load of them in exchange for a dish of strawberries and cream. Mangoes, we are urged to eat, but I cannot endure their terebinthine flavor. There are no oranges, no lemons, but a few bitter limes. A month's salary for a big strawberry short cake!!!

It is impossible to give any comprehensive description of this place in a hurriedly written letter, yet I am afraid if I skipped entirely now it will not show up again. We were landed at a dock alongside of the marine arsenal and machine shops. The machinery was buzzing and humming merrily with native work men at the machines and our naval officers superintending. Much has been done in the way of restoring partially disabled Spanish vessels and fitting them for service. Our own ships of course, were thoroughly overhauled in short order, though there was not much to do to them beyond painting them and stopping the six shot holes in the Baltimore.

The sea wall and parapets are of stone and the buildings look the same, though I fancy the latter are of adobe white-washed. On the parapets are mounted many frowning cannon, but they are old style—of the obsolete type, though there are a number of modern Krupp guns scattered through the arsenal. On the sea side is the governors residence and the houses of the civil and military staff. These were practically palaces and filled with the most magnificent furniture imaginable, all of the heavy, massive type. As in all warm countries the houses are white and have wide verandas surrounding. The lower floors are of tile and the upper ones of mahogany. The stairways are extra wide, the ceilings almost out of sight and the furniture reaching almost to the ceiling. I might add here that the governor's house was pierced by a shell which passed through the ceiling narrowly missing the piano. Passing the official residences, then came the hospital, pharmacy, and musician's quarters. Last came the barracks for the soldiers, and then one enters Cavite proper. The narrow city of narrow, dirty, filthy streets with naked children and half-naked adults who live chiefly on tobacco and fruit. The children are carried in a very funny way. They are placed straddle of the bearer's waist and rest on the hip bone which naturally projects in the leaning to one side posture.

General Anderson is a strict Sabbatarian and on Sundays we rest. Our men are very well and with the proper observance of sanitary precaution will remain so. Orders are strict that nothing but boiled water be drunk. Rain water at that and generally luke warm, for as you may imagine, it cools but slowly in this climate, and never gets cold. I fill my canteen, saturate the cloth covering thoroughly and hang it in an open window. The evaporation cools it somewhat.

Reveille sounds at 4:45 a. m. and officers as well as men must respond and present themselves on the parade ground in twenty minutes, armed and equipped. The mornings are usually pleasant and the drill hour is from six to seven. In the afternoon it rains two or three hours and it is no Oregon drizzle either, but thunder and lightning in all its tropical fury. But it is not uncomfortable when you go to dry barracks. One morning there were landed a few miles from our quarters one hundred and fifty Spanish prisoners, several officers and their families. The ladies were very dignified and one girl quite pretty. She brought forth the first exclamation of pity that I have heard.

Lieutenant Phillips has just handed me a most beautiful flower. The odor of which is so powerful as to fill a room. It smells something like the Mandrake and reminds me also of the orange, an overpowering sweetness. It has five white petals, one overlapping the other. About one inch long and half an inch wide and most delicately shaded from orange in the center to pure white on the tips and edges.

Today I wandered into quite a large building, attracted by a look through the doorway which revealed long rows of non-combatants, children and old men busily at work. A visit showed that they were engaged in cleaning rusty cartridges which they had dug up on the beach where the Spanish had buried them. One would have pronounced them utterly unserviceable, so encrusted with rust and dirt were they, but scoured with brick dust for five minutes by a 10-year old boy or an Octogenarian, they came out as bright and fresh as when they left the factory. In another place native machinists were repairing rusty cannons. The leaders of the insurgents are evidently bright men and take advantage of everything.

Today Kelly, Pick and I took a stroll into Old Cavite through which the road leads into Manila. It was not uncomfortable warm and we thoroughly enjoyed our trip into the country. We passed one native woman who had the most luxuriant hair I ever saw. It was jet black, thick, and reached to her ankles. What an ad she would make for the Skookum Hair Root Grower.

August 3—Today orders were issued sending to the front all troops in Cavite except the Oregon Infantry, which is left to guard over a million dollars worth of property. There was a great kick amongst both officers and men at "being left behind" as it was called, but tonight we are in a happy state of mind for the General has assured our Colonel that the choice is a compliment for us and that we were selected as the most trustworthy command to entrust with this important duty.

If the sun doesn't shine tomorrow and give me a chance to air my clothing it will be unwearable. You can't imagine how quickly things mildew and mold at this season, leather must be cleaned every day. My leather grip has stood three days in the large open room where we live, and it is green with mold. Some of the officers who had hung up their overcoats and left them for two weeks found them nearly ruined.

August 4.—The Monterey is here. It was a relief to see the tub today, or, as her prototype was called by the Rebs, a "cheese box on a raft", come plowing slowly through the rough waters of the bay with her decks awash and only her big turrets above the water. Until her arrival Admiral Dewey had no guns that could bombard Manila without placing the ships dangerously near their Krupp gun and you know a gun on terra firma is worth three or four on a ship, but now if it is necessary, he can stay right here in Cavite and pitch her thirteen-inch shells into Manila.

I wish you would tell both Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Norris that their boys are well and strong, both growing broad and heavy into well proportioned men. Rea especially looks several years older on account of a full black beard which is very becoming to him. Jones has also grown a very fine beard.

How I should like the morning paper at my door step each morning. Our latest copy is dated June 26th.

W. A. HUNTLEY.

Died.

RHOODES.—In Portland, at her home, 381 East Eighth and Schuyler streets, Mrs. Mary A. Rhodes.

The death of Mrs. Mary A. Rhodes, who was for many years a resident of Oregon City, occurred on Saturday, September, the seventeenth, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. B. Morgan, in Portland.

Mrs. Rhodes was the widow of Mr. C. R. Rhodes, who died in Oregon City in 1881. She was born in Reading, Penn., in 1825, but was taken white quite young to Indianapolis, Indiana, where she lived until after her marriage. In 1860 she crossed the plains with her husband, settling at first in LaGrande. Later the family moved to Oregon City where they resided for ten years, the last ten years of the deceased's life having been spent in Portland.

Mrs. Rhodes, while not one of the earlier pioneers, passed through all the hardships of the pioneer's life, both in Kansas, where the family lived for a few years on the way westward, and in Oregon. She had been a great physical sufferer for many years, and the hope of death had long been sweet to her.

She had borne six children, three of whom survive her—Mahlon B. Rhodes, Mrs. Carrie Blake Morgan and Mrs. Elia Higginson, the latter reaching her mother's bedside nearly two weeks before her death.

The funeral services were held Monday in the Congregational church in Oregon City and was attended by the nearer friends of the family.

WROX.—In Warren, Ohio, Sept. 16, 1898, William Upton, aged 27 years, son of James and Amanda Upton.

Mr. Upton was born in Oregon City 27 years ago and spent a portion of his early life here and had many friends who will learn of his untimely demise with feelings of regret. Death was the result of sickness contracted while visiting in South America.

The parents of the deceased, Mr. and Mrs. Upton, and a sister, Mrs. Scott, reside in Portland.

The remains will be brought here for burial.

RAMSBY.—In Oregon City, Sept. 19, 1898, Casper C. Ramsby, aged 41 years and 3 months.

Death again has visited our midst and claimed for its own, Mr. Casper Ramsby, who had but reached the prime of life, breaking up a home and leaving sorrow in the hearts of his wife and two children.

Mr. Ramsby was a right honorable citizen who possessed the good will of the community. He was a son of M. R. and Eliza A. Ramsby, and a brother of S. H. Ramsby, of Molalla; and a cousin of Max Ramsby of this city.

Until three years ago the family had lived on a farm at Molalla, but moved to Oregon City where they might obtain the best of medical assistance in the hope that he could be restored to health.

The funeral took place Saturday, conducted by Rev. A. J. Montgomery.

Married.

BRENER-HOWARD.—In this city Wednesday Sept. 21, 1898, at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. H. Oberg, Miss Effie Howard, of Clackamas Co. to Mr. Robt. L. Brener of Multnomah Co.

ECKERSON-SHOCKLEY.—In Oregon City Tuesday, Sept. 20, by Rev. A. J. Montgomery, Miss Ida Shockley, and Captain Theodore H. Eckerson.

The high contracting parties are both well known in Portland. Grace Holt who says she was married to E. C. Holt at Vancouver, Wash., Dec. 27, 1867, has brought suit for a divorce, and also asks to be allowed to resume her maiden name, Grace Whitlock. She charges her husband with being untrue to her. Bertha Berry is named as correspondent.—Oregonian.
