Rubber Band For Headache. "Departmental headaches are a distinct malady," remarked a well known physician to a reporter, "and it is somewhat of a surprise how many sufferers there are among department clerks from this trouble. The thing seems to grow among them, and they have their headaches as regularly as they have their work.

A simple remedy which is worth try ing is to put a rubber band around the head just above the ears. The band should not be tight enough to stop the circulation of the blood. The band known as the string band is generally sufficiently heavy for the purpose. It should be applied just as soon as it is noticed that the headache is setting in and taken off the moment the pain ceases. In many cases the rubber band works nicely, though it affords no relief when the headache is the result of stomach troubles or biliousness "I find also that a rubber band t wisted about a toe between the corn and the foot is a handy remedy to stor, the pain from a jumping corn. Co ns are very liable to be troublesome when there is much humidity in the comosphere. The rubber band seems to temporarily quiet the nerves in the toe, and in this way stop the pain. As in the case of a band around the her d, the pressure should not be tight enough to the the circulation of the blood " - washington Star. The Path of the carta.

The common idea as to the path of the earth being "fixed in space" taken exception to by astronomers, on the ground that there are few, if any, things in the domain of astronomy that can really be called fixed in space-the fact being that unceasing changes are going on, though these changes are generally so slow as to escape the notice of a superficial observer, but are fortunately periodic, so that they fall within the possibility of computation. Thus, the earth's path is not fixed, since the ecliptic changes its position among the stars, in consequence of which the obliquity of the ecliptic undergoes a very slow change, so that while at present it is a few seconds more than 28 degrees 27 minutes, in about 15,000 years, astronomers calculate it will be reduced to 22 degrees 15 minutes, after which it will begin to increase again, a change so slow and within such narrow limits that it can produce no sensible alterations in the

The fact remains a positive one, that, even if the earth in its orbital and consequently the sun in its apparent motion in the ecliptic were circular, neither the motion in declination nor in right ascension could be uniform

The Streets of Scoul. Streets, with a minimum width of 85 feet, with deep, stone lined channels on both sides, bridged by stone slabs, have replaced the foul alleys, which were breeding grounds of cholera. Narrow lanes have been widened, slimy runlets have been paved, roadways are no longer "free coups" for refuse, bicyclists scorch along broad, level streets, express wagons are looming in the near future, preparations are being made for the building of a French hotel in a fine situation, shops with glass fronts have been erected in numbers, an order forbidding the throwing of refuse into the streets is enforced-refuse is now removed from the city by official scavengers-and Seoul, from having been the foulest, is now on its way to being the cleanest city of the far east.—"Korea and Her Neighbors," by Mrs. Bishop.

Misbeauvior at Weddings. So much has been said and written about misbehavior at weddings, says The Lady's Pictorial, that one would have supposed that the necessity had passed for reminding fashionable guests that a church is the last place in the world wherein to indulge in small talk in a loud voice, to say nothing of climbing on chairs and seats for a better view of the bridal procession. At the marriage of Princess Dolgorouki in St. Margaret's, Westminster, the scrambling for "coigns of vantage" and the incessant chattering and laughing of the guests before and after the marriage ceremony provided enough material for half a dozen homilies from the clergy. And it was certainly not the men who were the worst offenders.

A story is told of Fanny Kemble, whose favorite summer resort was Len ox, that on her first season there she employed a self respecting villager, who had a comfortable turnout, to drive her about. He, feeling it to be his duty to make the drive as entertaining as possible, began to call her attention to the beauty of the scenery-which she wished to enjoy undisturbed-and to tell her who lived in certain houses as they passed along, until finally Mrs. Kemble, being unable to stand it any

The Gamblers' Capper.

"Many of the phases of life in the renderion are kalcidoscopio in their changes," said a hotel detective, "but there is one little group of men in this recinct that is much the same now that it was a dozen years ago. I mean the outside men of the gambling houses. They are well known to all sporting men, and I could name four or five who have done little else all their lives. It is their business to know the regular patrons of faro banks, and if the man who employs them has been forced to close up his old place and open a new one it is their duty to circulate the tip.

"A good outside man spends his time around hotels and in all night restaurants and picks up acquaintances wherever be can. After working up to the subject of gambling he invites his new friend to go around to a little place that is run honestly and safely. One of the best dressed loungers on Broadway, whose face has long been familiar to paraders on that sheet, is a puller in for a gambling house. He was a barkeeper a few years ago and there made a lot of acquaintances who are his stock in trade. He spends money as freely as a wine agent, and I have no doubt that he brings many thousands of dollars to the man who runs the gambling house. -New York Sun.
