A Farewell Reception.

The farewell reception given Rev. M. L. Rugg Friday evening last, is a memorable event in the history of the Oregon City Baptist church. The occasion was favored with farewell commendations from various pastors of the city churches who voiced the unanimous sentiments of the large appreciative audience present. The prevailing impression being that not the Baptist church alone but the city and community at large loses in Mr. Rugg a prominent worker. At the close of the exercises the church, in token of esteem presented Mr. Rugg and family several pieces of silver tableware which elicited renewed assurance that the unbounded kindnesses of his congratulation should never be forgotten. On the Sunday evening following, the farewell sermon ended the relation of pastor and people. LIEUTENANT HUNTLEY TALKS.

His Ideas in Regard to Life in Manila Will Interest All.

Lieutenant W. A. Huntley, of Co. I, Second Oregon Volunteer Infantry, arrived home from Manila Wednesday morning on two month's sick leave. The Enterprise reporter found him a rather well-looking sick man, but soon learned that 30 of the pounds avoirdupois which he carries was gained since he left the hospital 40 days ago, he weighing then but 125 pounds.

The first question naturally was "How are all the Oregon City boys?"

"I left every Oregon City boy in good health, with the exception of one or two who had some trivial ailments, not severe enough to keep them from performing daily duty, and all of them in good spirits."

"To what do you attribute the fact that while all of the other companies of the regiment have had deaths from disease, company I has not lost a man?"

"I attribute it to the fact that company I contained physically and morally, a better lot of men than any other company in the regiment. The company as a whole swallowed the bitter pills that fall to the lot of every soldier (and there were not a few of them) with a grin and a joke, instead of a scowl and a curse. They had the moral courage to abstain from the excesses so common to soldiers, and when disease came (and we had our share) were able to fight it with unimpaired strength. Such jovial fellows as Campbell, Norris, Logus, Cornfield Harding, and Miller, of Oregon City; McBride, Westbrook and Turner, of Albany, together with others I do not now recall, help wonderfully to keep them from thinking of their troubles. Then there is Moffatt, Finley, Poindexter, Smith, Stelmacher and Gambar, who are always looking out for the unlucky ones who are laid up in quarters."

"What is your opinion Mr. Huntley about sickness? Will there be more or less than in the past?"

"Less, by all means. We have better quarters, better food and more experience in cooking and handling it so that 'savings' can now be made and articles of food outside the regular diet can be purchased. The hospitals are now in good condition with plenty of nurses, medicines and food for invalids. Then too, the very best and healthiest season of the year is at hand which will give those who are run down a chance to get on their feet again."

The reporter then reminded the Lieutenant of the nasty letters that had been written regarding the handling of the "emergency funds" placed in the hands of the different captains for the use of the men and asked what basis there was for such claims.

"No basis whatever for the charge that any funds were gambled away or misappropriated; it would result in the court-martial and dishonorable discharge of any officer so doing, and you may be sure that it would be easily and quickly discovered, for every captain has to make an itemized account of the expenditures of this fund to the colonel of the regiment. But aside from that, I know personally every captain in the Oregon regiment and their honor in such matters is above question. I also know that there is no gambling among the officers of the regiment. As to the method of disbursing the $100 fund, ideas differ. Some of the men (the ones who wrote the letters referred to) I fancy think the amount should have been at once divided among the 80 members, giving each one the vast sum of $1.25 for emergencies. How far such an amount would go in an emergency and whether it would be ready to go when wanted, you can judge for yourself."

"Our captain's idea was that this money could be used most effectively in caring for the sick; that is, in buying necessary food and nourishment that the hospital would not supply. His idea is health first. What if a man did lack something in clothing or spending money; if the fund could be used to buy things for a sick man. Captain Pickens has said to me many times 'Huntley I want to take every man of company I back to Oregon with me and I'm going to do it.' He'll do it too, I firmly believe."

"Yes, you may rest assured that every dollar of money placed in his hands will be properly accounted for."

"But," the reporter interrupted, "some of the men seem to think that the fund has not been used to good advantage."

"You could not find two men among our 80 who think that the captain has not handled this fund in the way he thought best for the company. As I said before, ideas as to the best way to spend money differ. They may have thought they could have done better with it, but I do not believe they ever thought he misappropriated it."

"What do you think of the Philippines?" was asked.

"Oh! that's another story."

"Will the insurgents offer resistance to the United States?"

"Not when they know we are in earnest and propose to control the islands."

An envelope marked "To be opened on shipboard" was handed Lieutenant Huntley, when he said good bye to the boys, which proved to be as follows:

"Coartel de Espana" Manila, Oct. 26.

WHEREAS, On account of ill health it is necessary for Lieutenant Huntley to be temporarily separated from his company and to return to the United States on furlough. Therefore be it Resolved, That we the undersigned members of Company I do hereby extend to him the sincerest sympathy, regretting greatly that he has to leave us but wishing him a safe voyage and a happy return to the loved ones at home; remembering always his kindly and civil treatment of the men individually, as well as his soldierly bearing and general competency (especially his ability to impart plainly his knowledge, and at the same time remaining firm without giving offence) when commanding the company."
