A machine has also been procured for the occasion which will reproduced just such a snow storm as delights the heart of the children in the far eastern states. The usual Christmas songs and recitations will add to the attractive features of the Christmas exercises. Everybody cordially invited to attend

A PLEASANT SURPRISE .- Chas. Gallogly, of Bolton, was given a pleasant surprise party and oyster supper Tuesday evening in honor of his 41st birthday. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Greaves, Mr. and Mrs. Konkle, Mr. and Mrs. Catta, Mr. and Mrs. Dotta, Mr. and Mrs. Gailogly, Mrs. Fosburg, Mrs. Hettman, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Blake, Mrs. Dotta, Mrs. Lankins; Misses Stover, Dotta, Hughes, Cramer, Winchel, Maud and Edith Gallogly, Bessie Blake; Messrs. Henry and Will Cramer, Greaves, Magone, Myers.

THE BOLTON ANNEX.-It will be remembered that the directors of district 34, (West Side) established a branch interest in their school, and, under Miss Shipley, the school is doing nicely. Mrs. R. L. Greaves recently solicited sub. scriptions, to which many in Oregon City subscribed, and an organ was procured for the school. On last Saturday night the directors were invited among others to a social and literary gathering at the school house and the organ was formally turned over to the district, Prof. Gary, of the West Side schools, made the presentation address to which the chairman of the board responded. After a carefully prepared literary pro- complaining that I have deceived him gram by the pupils, coffee and cake were | twice. He lies. I have deceived him served by the ladies and a good social time was had. The patrons of the school wish to especially thank those of Oregon City who assisted in the purchase of their new organ.

Sir Henry Bellasis.

Some of the Royalists who were forced to endure the English commonwealth seemed to console themselves for the dullness of life under a Puritan government by fighting as many duels as they could compass, so that ignoble squabbles and foolish plots make up the history of their days.

Tom Porter was of a family which had zealously served the king. Under the new government his occupation was gone, and he descended to a triviality of life which finally involved him in a most pathetic event. This was a duel which he fought with his friend, Sir Henry Bellasis, and which, says Pepys in his "Diary," is worth remembering for "the silliness of the quarrel * * * a kind of emblem of the general complexion of the whole kingdom."

But silly as the quarrel undoubtedly was it carried in it an element of heart-

The two young men involved were intimate friends and companions, but one day, "being merry in company," Tom Porter said he should like to see the man in England who would dare give him a blow. With that Sir Henry Bellasis struck him a box on the car. The inevitable duel followed, wherein each was wounded. Sir Henry proved to be seriously hurt, so he called Porter, kissed him and bade him fly.

"For," said be, "Tom, theu hast hurt me. But I will make shift to stand upon my legs till thou mayst withdraw, for I would not have thee troubled for what thou hast done."

Porter profited by his friend's generosity and escaped to France. Sir Henry died a few days later, and Pepys concludes, "It is pretty to see how the world do talk of them as a couple of fools that killed one another out of > Herr Strauss' Eccentricities. Writing of the eccentricities of Herr Strauss, the dance music composer, a Vienna writer says he is as nervous as a composer as he is a director. Clad in a velvet costume, with patent leather boots reaching to his knees, his eyes aflame and in a fit of inspiration, he goes striding through the house like a mantac. If inspiration does not come to him in the salon, he clutches his papers and goes to his bedroom or to his wife's boudoir. Sometimes the waltz begun in the parlor is finished in the kitchen. Mme. Strauss, who appreciates and under-stands her husband's habits, has half a dozen pianos scattered through the bouse, and in each room a table with writing materials, so that in whatever nook her husband finds himself he is quite at home. Mme. Strauss was once a favorite actress on the Vienna stage.

Dickens and His Cat.

Charles Dickens was a lover of cats. He owned a large white one named Williamina, who selected a corner of his study for her kittens and brought them in from the kitchen one by one. Dickens had them taken away again, but Williamina persisted in bringing them back. The third time of their removal she did not leave them in the corner, but instead placed them at her master's feet and, taking her stand beside them, looked imploringly up at bim. Most of the family were finally given away. Only one remained. The little creature followed Dickens about like a dog and sat beside him while he

One evening the author was reading at a small table upon which was a lighted candle. As usual the cat was at his elbow. Suddenly the light went out. Dickens was much interested in his book and relighted the candle. It was only when the light became dim again that he turned suddenly and found the kitten deliberately putting the light out with her paw. She was lonely, she wanted to be petted, and this was het device for bringing it about.
