A Providential Escape.

"Manitoba Memories" Rev. In George Young relates an experience of his boyhood which, he says, formed the turning point in his career and led him eventually to choose the life of a missionary in the north land.

Early one stormy morning when 1 was a boy, says Mr. Young, I was feeding the cattle in the basement of a stable when a terrific windstorm struck the building and crushed it like an eggshell. Hearing the crash of the falling and breaking timbers, I fell on my knees in terror and began to pray.

In a moment, as it seemed, the storm passed and stillness prevailed. I was completely encompassed by the broken timbers and the mows of hay and grain which had been stored in the upper part of the barn. I was in utter darkness, too, and at first completely dazed. Finding myself unharmed, however, I recovered my senses and began to dig into the hay to escape.

After a long struggle I worked myself free from the hay and stood in the midst of the wreck.

It was afterward ascertained how narrowly I had escaped being crushed to death by the falling timbers. Had I been standing at the moment I must have been killed. The space wherein I had knelt was about a yard square and the only place where I could have escaped instant death.

Much was made of my remarkable escape, which I have always regarded as a direct interposition of Providence, and in consequence I have devoted my life to the Master's service.
