WOMAN'S WORLD.

SHE BECAME A LAWYER BY HER OWN UNAIDED EFFORTS.

Etiquette in the Nursery—English Army Nurses—Women and Outdoor Sports—Women in Foreign Orders, Plainly Dressed Royal Children.

Among the successful applicants for admission to practice law passed by the supreme court commissioners yesterday was Mrs. Amanda G. Peters, formerly Miss Shay of this city.

It is much to the credit of Mrs. Peters that she was able to pass the examination, for what she knows of the law she has learned by her own efforts and without the aid of office instruction or a collegiate course of study. While she resided in San Francisco she worked as a compositor on a morning paper, and her hours of leisure were few, but what time she had was spent in study.

A little over a year ago Miss Shay became the wife of C. E. Peters, and the couple removed to near Placerville, El Dorado county, where Mr. Peters was teaching school. Together they continued the study of the law, and three months ago they came to this city to prepare for the examination.

Etiquette in the Nursery. The nursery is the child's microcosm. Here he begins to practice those gifts and graces which will stand him in stead at a later day.

Let the children be taught to avoid the use of slang. It is as well that they shall have no special pet phrase and that their speech shall be refined.

They may play as merrily as they choose, but it is well that they shall not be too rough or boisterous. In going about a house children are not the gainers if allowed to tear from top to bottom of the stairs like little savages or suffered to shout at the tops of their voices or to interrupt conversation.

A well bred child will bring his toys and be neither a trouble nor a torment in the drawing room where his mother and her friends are talking.

About children's questions—as a rule, they should be answered as fully and clearly as possible, but children should not be encouraged in the mere asking of a long string of questions simply for the sake of putting themselves in evidence.

One needs to exercise discretion in answering the question that is asked because the child really wishes to know, and to decide what answer to give when the child is simply determined to be in the foreground. It is sometimes best to say very plainly and candidly to a child, "I cannot explain this to you now; I shall do so when you are older."

English children are kept in the nursery to an extent almost unknown among us. They see their parents less frequently than do American children.

Mamma is to them a sweet presiding genius, something very like a queen, who comes in now and then, to whom complaints are referred, who is the real sovereign, but is not always at their beck and call. The soft pillow bosom of nurse, usually a middle aged and comfortable sort of personage, receives their little heads in their childish trials and troubles.

The nurse takes the children to walk, attends to their meals, manages all their affairs.

The plan has something to be said in its favor, for certainly a mild mannered and equable nurse is better for a child than a worried and half hysterical mother.—Philadelphia Press.

English Army Nurses.

America, strictly speaking, has no army nurses. We have proficient nurses who care for the ill of patients in our show in various sports has steadily deepened and broadened. Every year women have a greater choice in the matter. A few years ago there was practically nothing but tennis and bowling open to them—both too violent to be possible for many women.

Women in Foreign Orders.

In the world of art men still monopolize to a great degree the orders of distinction. Only about 20 foreign orders are open to women, these being strictly confined to a small class.

In England, if the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem be ignored, only three honorary titles can be conferred on the gentler sex. These are the Crown of India, the Royal Order of Victoria and Albert and the Royal Red Cross. The total membership of women in these orders is about 200, of whom 70 are of royal blood.

reminders are of "high distinction."

There are now 52 Frenchwomen who belong to the great national Order of the Legion of Honor, and eight other legionnaires have been removed by death. At the head of the list stands Mrs. Rosa Bonheur, the great painter.

Plainly Dressed Royal Children.

Those wise little mothers who decry the American habit of overdressing their bits of babies will be interested to know that Prince Albert, the small mite of 4 years, who is in the direct line of succession to the throne of England, wears the plainest kind of frocks and bonnets.

The children of the royal family are always clothed simply. Their little arms are unhampered with frills and furbelows, and ribbons and bows are not continually getting into their precious mouths or tickling their soft, pretty necks.

Flower Baths.

It is not stated who is responsible for the latest feminine caprice in the matter of baths. Neither the beautiful Mme. Recamier, however, nor Miss Anna Held, our modern authority on bathing as a fine art, is associated with the newest expedient for rendering the skin soft and smooth and fragrant as a rose.

But true it is that the flower bath has won the fashionable maiden's approbation for the moment. To be sure, there is a smart bit of expense attached to such immeasurable luxury, but beneficial effects are sufficiently pronounced to justify the curtailment of expenditure in another direction and the opening of an account with a florist.

The method of preparation is extremely simple. Roses and violets hold sway in this as in numerous other features of "my lady's" toilet. To properly impregnate the water for the bath at least two dozen roses or half a dozen bunches of violets are required.

Wilhelmina in Bronze.

A bronze figure on exhibition now at one of the big silversmiths represents her majesty, Wilhelmina, and her dog. The bronze is by a Dutch sculptor, and the straight, stolid little figure and round, placid face look very like the photographs of the little sovereign.

A Dutch Supper.

Bicycle trips and costumes suggest an informality which is not altogether in accord with a caterer's spread served at one's home table, yet what party, large or small, makes a bicycle run without coming home ready to eat a substantial meal? A Dutch supper, as some one has chosen to call an informal spread of wholesome and toothsome dishes, makes a pleasant variety for an evening spread.

Women and Outdoor Sports.

Roughly estimated, it is perhaps a decade since women began to take an active part in more than two or three sports. It has been predicted time and time again that their interest was only a caprice, that outdoor exercise was only a fad. These predictions have grown fainter and fainter, until they are scarcely heard at all.
