This morning at the postoffice the advance sale of seats will commence for the engagement of the inimitable comedian Harry Corson Clarke who will make his first bow in this city as a recognized star, and will present the most laughable farce of the decade "What Happened to Jones," which ran for over three months in New York city last winter, and is now a great go in London. San Francisco, too, is most enthusiastic over its merits, and Mr. Clarke has been greeted by houses filled to their capacity, during the recent two weeks run in that city. There is nothing in the world like laughter. It is contagious and healthful. "The man who cannot laugh," says Carlyle, "is not only fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils, but his whole life is already a treason and a stratagem." The beauty of "What Happened to Jones" is that it makes you laugh in spite of yourself and there is nothing said or done at any time to offend the most fastidious. Such plays as "What Happened to Jones," says Allen Dale "are God sends." Mr. Clarke has brought about him a very strong supporting company and has elaborately staged and costumed the company.

St. Valentine Party. A delightful valentine surprise was given Mr. and Mrs. E. Kellogg, of White Hall, by the young people of Mt. Pleasant.

The program was arranged by Misses Riggs and Lazelle, and many surprises awaited the guests. When the young ladies brought in three wire hearts and hung in the arch between the parlors, many questions were asked but were well answered by them explaining that they were to fortell the future. Soon fairy soap bubbles were floating through the room and all were trying to fan theirs through the magic heart. Happy they who succeeded for a bright future awaits them. Many other novel games were presented. Nuts were passed around and the gentlemen found in theirs a paper heart with the name of one of the ladies present, which he took in to refreshments. Miss Riggs entertained the guests with a number of guitar solos.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg and daughter, Lucile, Mr. and Mrs. Titus and daughter, Ethel, Mr. and Mrs. H. Andrews, Mrs. E. Warner, Mrs. W. B. Stafford; Misses Riggs, Lazelle, Williams, Casto, Kidder, Warner and Andrews; Messrs. Parley and Lyman Andrews, Partlow, Lawton and Muir, of Oregon City.

A Great Naval Duel.

Henceforward—to use Nelson's words about his own most desperate action—"there was no maneuvering, there was only downright fighting," and great as was Jones' unquestionable merit as a handler of ships it was downright fighting endurance of the most extreme and individual character that won this battle. When thus in contact, the superiority of the British eighteens over the American twelves, though less than at a distance, was still great, but a far heavier disparity lay in the fabrics of the two enemies. The Richard was a very old ship, rotten, never meant for naval use. The Serapis was new, on her first commission. The fight hitherto having engaged the port guns of the latter, the starboard lower gunports were still closed, and from the ships touching could not be opened. They were therefore blown off, and the fight went on.

"A novelty in naval combats was now presented to many witnesses, but to few admirers," quaintly wrote Lieutenant Dale, who was in the midst of the scene below decks. "The rammers were run into the respective ships to enable the men to load"—that is, the staves of the rammers of one ship entered the ports of the other as the guns were being loaded. "We became so close fore and aft," reported Pearson, "that the muzzles of our guns touched each other's sides," and even so, by the testimony of the lieutenant on the lower gun deck of the Serapis, her guns could not be fully run out owing to the nearness of the vessels.—Captain Mahan in Scribner's.

An Anecdote of the Revolution.

Senator Bate of Tennessee told the following anecdote of Colonel Tom Sumter: Sumter was a great big giant of a fellow, with a voice like a fog horn. It is said his "holler" could be heard for miles. On one occasion when he was off on a foray the Tories came and captured his wife, Molly, and stripped the plantation of everything. When "Old Tom" came home and found Molly gone, his rage knew no bounds. Gathering together such forces as he could he put after the Tories. He overtook them on the third day and hung about until midnight. Then he deployed his forces around the camp and told them to await his orders to fire. He was afraid of Molly being shot in the melee. So when he got everything ready he opened his big mouth and let out a yell that fairly made the earth tremble: "Lay down, Molly! Lay down, Molly!" and Molly, recognizing those stentorian tones, fell prone on her face, and after the last "Lay down, Molly!" came the command fire and charge. Molly was recaptured without hurt.

How to Make Peach Sherbet.

Make a sirup with a quart of water and a pint of sugar, add a teaspoonful of granulated gelatin soaked in cold water, strain and add a quart of mellow peaches pared and pressed through a potato ricer, a cup of orange juice and the juice of a lemon. Freeze as usual.

How to Hang a Hammock.

The general idea that the head end of a hammock should be higher than the foot end is an error. The occupant should rest in a state of equilibrium—that is, in such a position that there will be no tendency to shift toward head or foot. To effect this the hips must rest at the lowest point at whatever degree of dip the hammock may be hung.

The pillow arbitrarily determines the position of the occupant. Whatever length of hammock extends beyond the feet should be hung proportionately higher than the head. There will be little or no comfort in trying to resist this natural law.

How to Cook Sweetbreads.

Parboil five sweetbreads for five minutes, and then place them in a basin of cold water. When they are cold, dry them in a cloth, dip them in a bowl of well beaten eggs and roll in cracker dust or bread crumbs. Fry in a pan of hot butter or beef suet.
