Frank Devill vs. Wm. Boehman.

This case was tried in the circuit court Wednesday afternoon, resulting in a verdict for defendant.

In April '97, Frank Brown, then the owner of the Anheuser beer hall in Portland, became acquainted with the defendant, who lived in Danascus.

Brown induced defendant to become a partner in the business and sold him a half interest in the concern.

Devill contended that he sold his half interest in the business to Boehman for $200 and turned everything over to Boehman.

The attorneys for the plaintiff were: C. D. Latourette and W. M. Gregory; for the defense G. E. Hayes and A. R. Mendenhall.
