Overland Train Collision.

Last Friday evening the Southern Pacific southbound passenger train had an almost miraculous escape from a serious wreck in this city. An extra freight train, running ahead of the overland, got stalled on the trestle and the train was cut in two, leaving the rear section with the air brakes set while the engine took the forward half into the yards here. Before the engine could return the air leaked from the brakes and the cars some eight or ten, started back down the grade. An effort was made to board them and set the hand brakes but resulted in failure. A flagman had gone back to signal the overland beyond the Abernathy creek and just as the wheels of the overland engine were grinding the track to back out of danger the heavily loaded freight cars crashed upon it. Strange as it may seem, no damage was done to the overland beyond tearing away the headlight and forward fixtures of the engine. The rear trucks of the caboose were lifted from the rails and turned partly around forming a bumping post against which was received the full force of the power exerted by the forward cars and resulted in derailing and badly damaging three freight cars, besides the caboose. No one was injured in the mix-up although several people were standing close to the track at the time. A wrecking train came up from Portland and succeeded in opening the line for travel by Saturday morning. Had the overland been one minute later in stopping, the occasion would have been marked by an undoubted large loss of life.
