Lord Kelvin at the Lecture Table, It is, perhaps, at the locture table that Lord Kelvin displays most of his characteristics. In the two loctures per week which he delivers to the junior class at Glasgow university he contrives to touch on most of the important points of his subject, passing from one to the other with a rapidity bewildering to lazy or ill trained students who profer the beaten track,

Egga, jellies, shoemaker's wax, treacle, all sorts of stuff, are used to flustrate the lectures, and homely experiments are recommended to the student, even the humble teaspoon, "so Ill adapted to the purpose for which it is intended," being pressed into the service. In the famous egg experiment he shows how Columbus might have gained his object without breaking the egg. When boiled and set spinning on a table, the egg rises and spins on its end.

Unboiled eggs, owing to the fluidity of the interior, do not rise, but if set spluning and then suddenly stopped and immediately released, they continue their motion for a little time. #### A Prophetic Dream.

The following prophetic dream is related by the president of a theologteal seminary: It had been the cus tom of one of the profe so.s to invite all the students, with members of the faculty, to dimer at a listed on the annual Thankseriving day On the morning of tant day the wife of this professor suddenly fell dend in her dressing room at 8 o'clock.

That morning at 7 o'clock one of the students woke up from a bad dream. He had dreamed that he sat down with the usual company at the Thanksgiving dinner and that immediately one of his fellow students rose in his place, snying that it was his painful duty to announce to the company that the wife of their host had suddenly died at 8 o'clock that morning.

This dream, however, he had ininstantly banished from his mind as an uncanny probability, and had thought no more about it. But on going to the dinner and taking his seat with the company he was unspeakably amazed to see the student seen in the dream rise and to hear him make the announcement made in the dream .-Kansas City Times.
