election day your correspondent penned a batch of items for the ENTERPRISE.

Then, as now, men were hastening on voting place at Beaver Creek. It is interesting to note some of the many Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Brooks have changes which have taken place in the decade of years. The Australian ballot system has come into use since then. A fine new hall furnishes a more commodious and convenient voting place, and graves. Many who were in the long procession of roll call "up yonder."

The youths of that day are among the making rapid strides toward manhood, came out with her for a short stay. Time has wrought many changes in the face of the country. A few patches of heavy timber remain, but Carus is Friday. "practically out of the woods." Mc-Calla Avenue renders driving to town a 'short but sweet" pleasure compared with the all-day experience of a few years since. Side lanes are fast becoming good servicable roads. At least a dozen mediate vicinity. Old ones have been repaired and improved. Our churches have declined in power and efficiency, but our schools have enjoyed material and intellectual advancement. In scholarship, deportment and general progress they rank among the best in the country. The correspondence page of the ENTERPEISE has a different aspect from that of ten years ago. New names and places have come to the front, and tures. But with improved conditions, It Joseph, at Stone. still retains its former well merited rep-newsy sheet.

Messre H. O. Inskeep, C. Baker, Hayhurse and others have been doing good work on the Lervis road.
