THE LOWER SHELP.

When from the chatter I retire And close my study door behind chair is wheeled before the fire-A thoughtful hand has drawn the blind. Then o'er the shelves I range my eye, Where volumes mix with pipes and delf, he stately pompous fellows-high; The ragged—on the lower shelf.

They line my study's narrow wall, These friends to whom for rest I come, cannot say I know them all, But this I'll swear—I worship some. And would you know the gods I serve With love that's well nigh worthy self, Glance, stranger, o'er the shabby curve That bulges on the lower shalf.

Tou mount a somewhat shaky chair;
You point to princely tomes alove,
With, "This is fine!" and "This is rare!"
"'t where's the book a man can love?
Ah., eave the grand ones, I bessech!
They do but senjure thoughts of pelf,
While these untily beggar reach

A CURIOSITY OF ALASKA.

All Over the World. One of the greatest curiosities noted by travelers in Alaska is the wonderful due to the phenomena of the tides, the Pacific gulf stream, the mysterious ocean currents and the peculiar forms-

Logs and timbers are readily identified there as having come from Japan, China, India and other parts of Asia, Batterr Filteriso.-One of the most in as well as from California, Washingwood and the pine in this driftage. Some of those from the state of Washington contain the names of the men there, uplifted by the roots, cast into the sea by some terrible tempest and sent floating round the world. Other persons on the beach descry big trees floating shoreward, with fantastic roots above the waves like some sea monster. One beach after another has been formed by the floating timbers. shore the deposits are so old that the wood in some places is petrified, while a little deeper in the earth it has turned into coal. The newer logs are without bark and as hard as stone, due, it is thought, to their long immersion in salt water. They have all taken on a whitish appearance. In places the timbers are piled 20 feet bigh; at other points they rise to a height of only four or five feet.

Under this wonderful beach are found large quantities of dark, ruby sand,

A Modest Hero.

Not long ago a French chroniqueur-Montmirail of the Paris Gaulois-encountered in a little village of the south of France a gardener who wore, pinned on his clean Sunday blouse, the The Enterprise and Oregonian for $2.60 ribbon of the Legien of Honor. Naturally, the newspaper man desired to know how he got it. The gardener, who, like many of his trade, seemed to
