

CHAUTAUQUA TALK.

Greater Platform Urged for Next Year.

We are all congratulating ourselves up on the very successful termination of another season, all debts paid and something left in the treasury. But if this success comes with practically no advertising, what might we not expect with liberal advertising? Now is the time for a forward movement. The experimental age is past, the Willamette Valley Chautauqua Assembly has demonstrated its right to exist. It has become the people's college, the greatest educational gathering, not only of Oregon but of the entire Pacific coast.

One of these forward movements must be a greater platform. We must not content ourselves with too little. If this year's program drew 5000 people, what would a greater program do? We need to keep posted on the great Eastern Chautauquas, where all the way from ten to fifty thousand people gather in a day. And none of them have better grounds and prospects than we, with grand old trees and mountain peaks and rippling waters. We ought to attract visitors from the whole United States, for we can claim all scenic Oregon as part of our attraction.

I happen to glance just now at the Mountain Park Chautauqua platform of Maryland. Let us see what they are having this year. Out of 50 lecturers, readers and entertainers noted on their list, I find the names of Rev. Sam P. Jones, Dr. Russell H. Conwell and Col. G. W. Bain, both of whom we have tried to get year after year; Dr. P. S. Hensou, Congressman Delliver, Rev. Anna Shaw, Dr. Samuel Phelps Leland, Homer B. Sprague, Maad Ballington Booth, all in one year, besides many others perhaps fully as great, but whose names are not so familiar. In one month those men will be lost to us, why? Because they are engaged one and two years ahead. We ought to begin preparing next year's program now, and advertise from this time on. Dare great things, do great things and begin now.

Another thing, all the necessary advertising cannot be done by the Chautauqua Board alone. Business men could have the Chautauqua auditorium, or some other suitable device and announcement printed on the backs of their envelopes, small circulars could be prepared for enclosure in all letters. You never get a letter from Seattle without something from their Chamber of Commerce. Advertising pays. And we cannot depend on Portland to do this for us. She has her own great interests to forward. "It lies not in our stars, but in ourselves" to shape our fortunes.

While we want all the help we can get from Portland, and Salem and all Oregon, the central moving force must be here. Rest assured we shall find helpers, Portland and all the state will be proud to help us when we help ourselves. The fact that a manufacturing town, small as Oregon City, has undertaken what she has, and accomplished it so well, has already stamped us a progressive community. Nowhere else are the young people more generally thinking of higher education; nowhere else are audience becoming more critical, more capable of weighing and judging the merits of speakers. The last seven years has been a liberal education to an entire county hitherto cut off from schools and universities.

But another matter needs immediate consideration. That is, handling the crowds that this expensive movement will bring. The East Side Railway has done well, and always will be an important factor. Her interests are ours. But last year, when Sam Jones was here, more people were left along the way, unable to get room on the cars, more people, I say, than actually reached here. The line was tasked beyond its capabilities. What then? Extraordinary fortune has so placed us that another great artery of travel touches the borders of our park, the Southern Pacific Railway. Hitherto it has not paid them to run special trains for our accommodation, our programs have not warranted it, but now we are steadily reaching that point. Their interests, too, are ours, and the Southern Pacific, with four or five Chautauqua assemblies along its route from Oregon City to Los Angeles, all of which league together secure the same speakers, can arrange to run a spur directly into our grounds, just as the East Side Railway does, and handle the crowds with ease and expedition. It will be necessary for the Southern Pacific to connect itself by car-line with the heart of Portland, for no great masses of people, can on short notice, find their way on foot through heat and dust to the Union depot. Connect the Union depot with the centers and the circuit is complete. Then it will pay us, and pay them to enter upon the Greater Chautauqua.

BROWNS BOUGHT IT.

Oregon City Woolen Mill Changes Hands.

The Oregon City Woolen Mills have changed hands. While the formal transfer has not been made, the deal has been closed and Brown Bros. will hereafter be the sole proprietors of the concern. About three months ago Brown Bros. brought suit in Portland, praying for the appointment of a receiver for the mills. Judge Bellinger concluded that an institution that had paid as good dividends as the Oregon City Woolen Mills had for the past 30 years, needed no receiver. An amicable adjustment of affairs has since been reached with the above result.

All the work hands and foremen will hold their positions, but there may be some changes made in the office employees.

Want to Fight Again.

The Spanish war veterans are ready for another fight. The boys of the Second Oregon, who performed such gallant deeds in the Philippines, are now anxious to get on the main line of the Orient. The old officers of the various companies are receiving letters from a number of Second Oregon boys, residing in various parts of the state, asking to be included if a call for volunteers from Oregon is issued. There seems to be a peculiar fascination in army life to induce the boys to want another chance at it. Their trip to the Philippines was filled with many hardships, but there was enough satisfaction in it for compensation. During the late encampment at Salem many of the volunteers in camp stated freely that they were ready for enlistment if troops are to be sent from this state to China. The men from this state have a record to be proud of and if troops are to be sent they will have a good chance. —Albany Herald.
