JACOB SHADE DEAD.

Ex-County Treasurer the Victim of Heart Failure.

Deputy Treasurer Jacob Shade died of heart failure at his home in this city Saturday morning at 3:30 o'clock. The attack came upon him at midnight and he died three hours later. The deceased had been subject to heart trouble for several years, but was in his office the entire day prior to his death, apparently in splendid health. Mrs. Shade was alone with her husband when the fatal attack came upon him. Dr. Strickland was summoned but he was beyond medical aid.

In 1896 Mr. Shade was elected county treasurer by the populist people and was re-elected to the same position in 1898, his last term expiring in July, 1900. Since that time he has filled the position of deputy treasurer under his former deputy, Alfred Luelling, who succeeded him in office.

During the civil war Mr. Shade served in Company F, 58th Ill., Vol. Infantry, and was present during the siege of Mobile.

The deceased was born in Ohio in 1825, and came to Oregon in 1880. A wife, two daughters, Mrs. Hassler and Mrs. Wan, of Hillsboro, and son Charles Shade, of Alaska, survive him.

He was buried in the city cemetery Monday morning at 9 o'clock under the auspices of Meade Post, G. A. R. of which he was a member. The services were conducted from St. Paul's Episcopal church, Rev. P. K. Hammond officiating. Many beautiful floral offerings were contributed and a large body of friends attended the funeral.

Mr. Shade was held in high esteem throughout the county and his death produced profound regret.

Oregon City Academy.

The Oregon City Academy, on upper Seventh street, which was opened last October, is becoming one of the solid institutions of the country and is filling a long-felt want. It began with only seven pupils and closed last June with a total enrollment for that year of 40 pupils.

The course of study offered is the full Eastern academic course of four years.

Regular students last year made rapid progress, completing on an average fully two school grades. The academy will begin its second year the 1st of October, with the promise of a good attendance. Two pleasant schoolrooms, conveniently furnished, have been arranged, and the corps of teachers will be increased in the near future, it being the intention to build up a permanent modern academy.

W. H. Davis, principal, is a graduate of the Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, in classical course. He was president nine years of Wiley University, at Marshal, Tex.; professor of language one year in Orleans College, Orleans, Neb.; president of Hartsville College, Hartsville, Ind., three years; president of College of Philomath, Philomath, Ore., two years, and has also taught in the public schools.

M. J. Davis, professor of mathematics, is a graduate of Wheaton College in the Latin-scientific course and has been professor of mathematics in Hartsville College, Hartsville, Ind., in Northwestern Illinois College, Fulton, Ill., and in the College of Philomath.

With this record of experience in other places and their success in Oregon City the past year before them, the prospects of the new institution are certainly flattering. Too many institutions of learning cannot be added to our city, and such a meritorious school deserves the hearty co-operation and encouragement of Oregon City's best people and all accessible who desire to give their sons and daughters the advantages of an academy education.

City Council.

At a meeting of the city council held Wednesday evening, the following business was transacted:

An ordinance was passed purchasing 31,000 feet of lumber to be used in repairing Main street.

Liquor licenses were granted J. W. Cole, Frank Nehren and Paul Hussock.

A new sidewalk was ordered built in the alley in block 29.

Bills aggregating $700 were allowed.

Treasurer's quarterly report was read and approved.

By a vote of 5 to 4 John Bittner was elected over Tom Miller to superintend the construction of the new sewer, at a salary of $2 25 per day.

Death of a Pioneer.

The death of Mrs. Marietta Painter occurred at her home in Canemah last Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, after a lingering illness of several months.

Mrs. Painter had been a resident of this county for 30 years, coming to Oregon in 1875. The deceased was a native of Missouri, being born in Shelby county in 1839.

The deceased leaves five children, Flavius, Fred and Joseph Painter, L. H. Fenster and Mrs. Timothy Finnegan. Her mother, who is 81 years of age, also survives her.

Mrs. Painter was a woman for whom the community will mourn, her whole life character being of the kind that friends will cherish forever.

The funeral services were conducted from the family residence at Canemah at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. J. H. Beaven officiating.

MIGHT HAVE KILLED HIM.

But Rajah, the Mad Elephant, Gently Pushed Lemon Away.

The last notable act in the career of Rajah, the man killing elephant, before his peaceful death in the winter quarters of Lemon Bros.' circus at Argentine was an act of mercy. While he was in one of the vicious moods that preceded his final delirium, when he was tugging at his great chains in an attempt to break away and destroy things, when even his regular attendants kept at a safe distance and cast furtive glances at the furious monster in dread and expectation of seeing him break from his fastenings, Rajah, thirsting for blood, spared a human life that he knew was entirely at his mercy. Attaches of the circus who witnessed the incident declare that Frank Lemon, their employer, will never be nearer to death and live to tell of it than he was on this occasion. Why Rajah did not kill him as he had killed Frank Fisher, his former keeper, and eight other men when he had him in his power and was in the killing mood will remain one of the mysteries in the circus fraternity.

All that day the men employed at the quarters were nervous. Rajah was acting as he did a year before, when he drew the stakes to which he was chained out of the ground and plunged through the corrugated iron wall of the building as "Little Edna," the bareback rider, crashed through the paper covered hoops held up by the clowns. He was acting very much as he did the night before he crushed Fisher's life out. The horses balked in the training ring and pricked up their ears and snorted at the partition that separated them from the restless monster. The resounding blows he struck upon the ground with his great trunk and the crackling and splintering of thick planks as he piled them up with his abbreviated tusks were ominous sounds in the ears of those who were familiar with Rajah's career. "Elephant Patty," who had been instructed to put things in order in the stall, threw up his job and was seen no more. "Daft Bill," who had set up a loud laugh as Fisher grasped his life out under the elephant's feet, had one of his hilarious spells again, and that foreboded trouble.

But two men had ever been able to do anything with Rajah "when the fit was on him." They were Frank Fisher and Frank Lemon. The latter always believed Rajah felt kindly toward him and would not harm him. But Rajah had loved Fisher when the keeper was sober and feared him when he was drunk and then had killed him. Still Mr. Lemon had no fear.

Rajah was down on his knees, ripping up a plank with his tusks.

"Up, Raj, up!" shouted Lemon, and Rajah arose. This act of obedience increased the master's confidence, and he stepped closer. The elephant swung his trunk in the air and brought it down against the ground at Mr. Lemon's feet with a sound like that given by a heavy stroke on a bass drum.

"Raj, Rajah! Behave yourself!" cried the showman.

Again the trunk was raised in the air, and a great roar reverberated through the building. It ended with a suggestion of a whine. The roustabouts held their breath. The elephant lowered his trunk slowly, while his eyes blinked and showed red where they should have been white. Then he lunged forward and with a side movement of the trunk gently but firmly pushed the man away.

It was not the pleading of the men that caused Mr. Lemon to retreat. He saw a new meaning in the elephant's manner toward him. By his action the great brute said:

"Keep away, Frank. I don't want to hurt you."

The next moment he pounded the floor viciously with his trunk and then drove his blunted tusks against the planks and splintered them.—Kansas City Star.

A Name For Her.

He is a little Boston boy, and he has recently been introduced to the mysteries of "The Arabian Nights" by his mother. He has been greatly delighted by the marvelous tales, and they have been constantly in his mind. The small boy's mother is not the thin, eyeglassed and intellectual woman sometimes said to be the representative Boston matron. On the contrary, she is fair, plump, and it would not be polite to say whether or not she is 40. But at any rate she is plump and quite plump, and the little boy, being a Boston boy, perpetrated a joke the other day.

"Mother," he said, speaking to her seriously, "I have a new name for you."

"What is it, dear?" she asked.

"Fati-ma," he answered, with an emphasis on the first syllable, a broad smile breaking over his face.—New York Times.

On the Safe Side.

A distinguished officer of the federal side came to visit a southern planter after the war, and they talked about the shifts to which people were reduced in order to save their property. Chloe was called. "Tell the general where we preserved our silver plate."

Without hesitation she answered, "Under some planks in the loft."

The master was astonished. "Why, I don't remember that. Was it really so?"

"Oh, yes, massa."

When the guest was gone out, Chloe was called again. "I can't make it out. I remember nothing about the loft."

"Why, master, I was not going to tell the truth. The plate was buried in the garden. Who knows there may be another war, and then them rascally Yankees would come and search our garden, and we should lose our plate."—Cornhill Magazine.

A Growing Industry.

The cheese factory at Logan is in a prosperous condition and is constantly increasing its output. At present 160 pounds of cheese are produced daily, and they expect to increase the output to 250 pounds per day by the 1st of October, as by that time pastures will be better and milk more plentiful. Besides supplying the Oregon City market, Logan cheese is sold to Portland epicures. The full capacity of the factory is 3500 pounds of milk, or 385 pounds of cheese, daily. The present capacity of the factory can be doubled by simply putting in a larger vat, which it will probably be necessary to do next season.

Poisonous toadstools resembling mushrooms have caused frequent deaths this year. Be sure to use only the genuine. Observe the same care when you ask for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. There are poisonous counterfeits. DeWitt's is the only original Witch Hazel Salve. It is a safe and certain cure for piles and all skin diseases. Geo. A. Harding.

"Can China be Saved?" is the title of an exhaustive article by Talcott Williams in the Review of Reviews for September. Mr. Williams possesses a rare fund of information on Oriental subjects, and he has a definite program to offer for the solution of the world problem in China. Taking as a model the Imperial Customs Service, so long and ably administered by Sir Robert Hart, Mr. Williams proposes to organize the Chinese government in a system of commissions, under nominally Chinese control, but officered by Europeans, just as the customs service is now officered. The present Chinese civil-service machine would be retained, because it is suited to the temper and needs of the people. In the same magazine is an able defense of the missionaries in China by the Rev. James S. Dennis, D. D., the author of "Christian Missions and Social Progress"; "Japan's Present Attitude Towards China" is the subject of a paper written in Japan as recently as July 24 by Joseph King Goodrich, an experienced observer of Japanese politics, and the Rev. William N. Brewster, a missionary of the American Methodist Church at Hinghav, writes from that point of view regarding the duty of the United States government in the coming reconstruction of China. These four articles have been written within a few weeks, from four distinct points of view, by men long familiar with the conditions about which they write, and with distinct reference to the present crisis.

The emergency bags sent by a church society to Kansas soldiers in the Philippines contained among the necessities a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, the well known cure for piles, injuries and skin diseases. The ladies took care to obtain the original DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, knowing that all the counterfeits are worthless. Geo. A. Harding.
