45 MINUTE SCHEDULE.

To LOCATE COUNTY ROAD—Louis Tuckoldy, has petitioned the county court for the location of a county road in to his premises in the McNary claim T. 2. S. R. 2. E. The petition states that the premises are not reached by any convenient road and asks that viewers be appointed to meet and view the road and locate it, for petitioner's ingress and egress to and from his premises.

SALMON RIVER HATCHERY.—Tom Brown returned Monday from his summer's work at the state hatchery on the upper Sandy. He reports 1,200,000 young salmon turned loose in the Sandy river the past season. A large number of Indians are employed at the hatchery and assist very satisfactorily in the work. The stream is used for logging purposes and hinders the work at such times as logs are floated down. Mr. Brown will return again soon.

CONTEST OF TIMBER CLAIMS.—A contest was begun in the land office yesterday by the N. P. R. R. over 13 timber claims with 85 more to come on later. Attorneys Hays, of Seattle, S. C. Spencer, of Portland, T. B. Handy and Claude Thayer, of Tillamook represent various parties to the contest. Claude Thayer is accused by the railroad of collusion and fraud with the settlers in making proofs and retarding the sale of contested lands. The case has already occupied several days and will be pending several more.

PROBABLY A MASTADON.—The Willamette Pulp and Paper Company has at its office a bone almost three feet long and 30 inches in circumference at the largest part, supposed to be of an extinct animal. It was found by a mill hand several miles up the Willamette in a thickly-timbered ravine. It was almost hidden in the moss and dirt and shows signs of disintegration in places while other parts are in a good state of preservation. The remainder of the bones corresponding to this, outlines an animal of stupendous proportions. Persons in the vicinity of where the bone was found are on the lookout for other parts of the skeleton.

ROYALLY ENTERTAINED.—Mr. and Mrs. Doremus, entertained the G. A. R. and W. R. C. at their home on Wednesday, Dec. 5, the occasion being their 30th anniversary of their wedding day. The old soldiers enjoyed a review of the early days spent on the battle field. Just before retiring to the dining room, Mr. G. A. Harding presented Mr. and Mrs. Doremus with a lovely carving set in behalf of the Post and Corps. Mr. P. Colbert presented them with a silver dinner bell. They received many other presents among which was a handsome set of table linen. They retired to the dining room, where a bountiful lunch was awaiting them. When all were seated there were thirty guests. They

For Horsemen.

The eleventh annual holiday issue of The Horse Review, published at Chicago, Ill., will appear Dec. 11, and all lovers of the trotter and pacer can rest assured that it will prove a genuine treat. A vast amount of instructive and entertaining matter, by the best posted and most noted turf writers, on a large variety of topics, profusely illustrated, will be found within the magnificent chromolithographed covers of this special issue while the statistics of the year's performances, which have been such a feature in the past, are in every way in advance of their previous high standard of excellence. One of its most important features will be the colored supplements of the world's champions, The Abbot 2:03 1/4 and Crescens 2:04. These pictures are 14 1/2 x 10 1/2 inches, inserted loose, and are the finest horse portraits ever produced. They are not mere colored lithographs or reproductions of idealized paintings, but are immediate replicas of colored photographs, showing both horses in harness, with drivers up, rigged exactly as they were when they captured the world's records now held by them. They are absolutely perfect likenesses of both horses and drivers. Every detail of color, including the color of the horses, their boots, harness, sulkeys, the drivers' caps, jackets, etc., is faithfully reproduced. Nothing like these pictures has ever before been attempted in horse portraiture. The price of the Christmas Number, including both of these supplements, is but 25 cents, and it can be had promptly by remitting to The Horse Review Co., 910 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Illinois.

All subscribers whose names are on the list at time of publication will receive this great number without cost, as will also new subscribers beginning their term with this issue.

The true of the United States court was taken up yesterday with the trial of H. H. Stalnaker, of Canby, a school teacher indicted for destroying a letter belonging to his wife. Stalnaker is a native of West Virginia and evidently belongs to the class once known there as 'po' white trash.' Some years ago he married a girl who was a pupil in his school, and they have two children. Last fall he went back to West Virginia and on his return brought back with him a young woman, a cousin of his. Soon after their return a letter for Mrs. Stalnaker, bearing a special delivery stamp, arrived at the Canby post-office, and the postmaster gave it to Stalnaker to deliver to her, but she never received it. Not long after another letter arrived for Mrs. Stalnaker, with instructions on it—that it should be delivered to no one but herself. The postmaster took it to her and she found it was from the father of the girl Stalnaker had brought out from West Virginia, and informed her that he had taken her away without the knowledge or consent of her father. This was enough for Mrs. Stalnaker, who immediately left her husband, whom she had learned to despise thoroughly. When she asked him what he had done with her letter, he told her that there was something in it which would make her mad, and so he destroyed it. In court he testified that he gave her this letter, and introduced his cousin to swear that she had seen him do so. He also had as a witness an old man and a girl who came out with him about the same time that he brought his cousin from Virginia. They are evidently of the same class as himself, and it is the opinion of some, who listened to the trial and saw and heard them testify, that they belong to a family of degenerates.

The jury, after being out about 15 minutes, returned a verdict of guilty. The court will pronounce sentence this morning.
