"The Angel of the Alley."

Alvah Lawrence Hardman, who says himself that he is a "nice young man," was in Justice McAnulty's court last Wednesday, charged with assault and battery. It seems that Mr. Hardman is nice alright, but he was led into desecrating the Sabbath through his love for Miss Cora Thornton. It all happened last Sunday afternoon in the alley between the two boarding houses known as the Cliff House and the New England hotel. Some boys were trying to get up a friendly fight. A new boy named Rhoda Bagby has recently arrived in town from Molalla Corners. He is red-headed and a scrapper. He has not licked all the boys in Oregon City yet, but he is polishing them off one by one, and using all kinds of liniment for his bruises in the meantime. Last Sunday afternoon Carl Moore, Hiram Cosper and several other boys, decided to combine and give the red-headed wonder from Molalla Corners, such a drubbing that his mother would have to gather up his old photographs to remember how he looked when he was out on the farm. Incident to a preliminary skirmish, there was some swearing going on in the alley. Miss Cora Thornton's mother keeps the New England boarding house, and Miss Cora was at home visiting with her mother. Among the boarders is Alvah Lawrence Hardman, 20 year old, with a Byronic cast of countenance and nut-brown hair that curls like corn tassels in the fall. That he should become enamored of the fair Cora, is no wonder. He listened to the boys swearing in the alley, and being anxious to show his gallantry asked the young lady if he should drive the offensive youngsters from her hearing. She was delighted to know of his devotion, and said "yes."

The work of blasting the ledge of rocks opposite the falls, has been carried on by the Southern Pacific Railroad company with a great deal of difficulty the past week. The curve in the track at this point is to be straightened and made more secure. Old residents recall the fact that about 20 years ago a man was killed on this ledge, under peculiar circumstances. Some rocks were being taken out when an unseen charge of dynamite exploded. Inquiry revealed the fact that more than ten years previous, workmen engaged in taking out rock for the foundation of the woolen mills, had left a charge of dynamite that did not explode when ignited. After being in the rock for more than ten years it exploded with fatal results. Money to loan at lowest rates. HEDGECOCK & GRIFFITH.
