Ridpaths' History In Great Demand.

CARLOAD RECEIVED HERE WILL NOT BE SUFFICIENT.

Carefully Written History of All Nations and Ages--Will Find Its Way into Every Home Library Throughout the English-Speaking World--May Be Had Cheaply.

A world's history, comprising nine massive royal octavo volumes, has just been issued and, as an evidence that Portland is a literary city, the fact is cited that already a carload of this great work has been sold here. History is the most patriotic and exemplary study extant, and the people of the United States are pre-eminently a history-reading and a history-writing and a history-making country. In profound literature and science and mechanics, as well as the fine arts we hold the front rank.

It was left to the bright and penetrating intellect of an American to compile a dictionary of the English language which is the recognized authority in every nation on earth, and it is not strange, that to the lot of a citizen of this country who is already famous as a historian, has fallen the sacred duty of writing a history of the entire world. And it is now an assured fact that Ridpath's History of the World will be the recognized authority on the history of all ages and peoples on the globe for generations to come.

It gives a panoramic and graphic description of every nation which has passed in the great procession of the ages. It deals with the birth, growth and development and the decay or present greatness of all nations. It begins with man in his lowest scale and traces his rise through brutism to savagery, through savagery to barbarism and through barbarism to civilization. Mr. Ridpath, in his sublime, intensely interesting and vivid style, takes up an infant nation and handles it as though it were in swaddling clothes, speaks charitably but firmly of its youthful errors, approvingly of its virtues; minutely of its glory and compassionately of its decay and ruin. Step by step he traces the course of the nations that exist today and shows their relative importance and power and wherein they differ.

After treating of the profound, Mr. Ridpath easily and naturally falls into the romantic. He tells the romantic stories of all the individual nations in this great whirlpool of world-growth. The stories of wars and conflicts and the effect they have wrought on our present civilization are noted. Political intrigue and mercenary conquest are followed with the same unerring judgment.

Ridpath's History of the World comprises nine massive royal octavo volumes (the equivalent of 50 ordinary volumes) and contains over 4000 engravings, 35 historical maps in color, 10 chronological charts in color, 14 colored plates depicting types of the races, 33 genealogical diagrams, 8 colored reproductions of etchings on tint blocks. A picture to every page or so.

Nothing could be more generous. Few physicians have such confidence in their remedies. There is no reason why every afflicted person should not avail themselves of this exceedingly liberal offer, as they may never have another such opportunity. No death comes as suddenly as that from heart disease. Mrs. A. Kronic, of Huntington, Ind., was cured after 30 physicians failed; Mrs. Flora Graeter, of Bristolville, O., after 22; Jas. R. Waite, the noted actor, after a score had pronounced him incurable; Mrs. Frank Smith, of Chicago, after five leading physicians had given her up; Mr. Julius Keister, of Chicago, after 10; Mrs. R. Parker after 16 failed.
